HARRINGTON, Del. — Junior exhibitors found themselves in the spotlight, literally, at the Delaware State Fair Tuesday night.

Class winners from the beef, goat, lamb, and swine shows were introduced under bright lights for the choosing of champions. Emcee for the event was Dennis Hazzard, general manager of the fair.

It was the third annual Livestock Extravaganza, where the best out of a total of 450 animals exhibited by 300 youth were on display.

Grand champion exhibitors were Josh Hastings of Townsend, Del., beef; Cole

FAIR HILL, Md. — Kyle King got his first experience in the show ring when he was 4 years old, handling his older brother's market lamb.

Now 14, Kyle King has marked another big milestone — exhibiting his first grand champion market lamb at the Cecil County Fair here this week.

"I'm really proud of myself," King said of his accomplishment leading the 111-pound Suffolk lightweight to the title. This was his fifth year as an "official" 4-H exhibitor. He's shown a reserve champion lamb before, but never the top one.

King's lamb demonstrated "ideal finish and very good conformation," said Robert Herr, who traveled from Lancaster County to judge the event in which 12 exhibitors showed a total of

Compared to Thursday, slaughter steers sold with a weaker undertone. The quality of the run was mixed, but did include a few cuts of well-fed steers. However, since the Thursday run was comprised of mostly high Choice and Prime cattle, the top-end of the early week market was not fully tested. The local finished market remains extremely good, as buyers are still willing to pay in the low 80's for the right kind. There is no concrete reason that is allowing prices to stay at such a bullish level, but as long as packers are still willing to lay down the greenbacks at the current cash levels, you're not going to hear a lot of producers asking to many questions. The current July live cattle contract at the CME moved up .50 on Tuesday to close at 75.30, with the nearby August contract gaining .60 to close at 74.20; with both months moving closer to matching last weeks Western cattle market that was from 73.00-75.00. Slaughter Holstein steers sold steady to firm on Monday as a very good supply of high Choice and Prime cattle were on offer. The Holstein run on Tuesday was very light, and a trend was not established. There were not enough slaughter heifers to test the market. Slaughter cows sold steady to 2.00 lower throughout the bulk of the grades, with the majority of the supply consisted of Lean cows.

Slaughter bulls sold with a lower undertone on a light test. The two-day run included 296 steers, 36 heifers, 351 cows, 19 bulls, with 8 head of feeder cattle.

Slaughter Steers: High Choice and Prime 2-4 1200-1490 lbs 80.00-83.50. Choice 2-3 1080-1460 lbs 77.25-80.00, good supply of Charolais-crosses on Tuesday 1180-1490 lbs 78.50-81.00. Calves: Compared to Thursday's graded sale, Veal calves sold steady to weak. Holstein bull calves suitable for special-fed veal barns sold mixed with the bulk 10.00 to 20.00 lower. Graded Holstein heifer calves sold sharply higher on heavier weight offerings with the Graded Number 1 calves trading 4.00 or higher. Bidding was active on average quality offerings. In the meat market, Northeast special fed veal mostly 240.00-285.00, with few lots at sharply higher levels on very good demand and very light offerings. The PA Department of Ag graded 772 head of bulls and heifers for the graded sale, with around 95 percent of the graded run going back on feed.

Compared to Tuesday, slaughter steers sold fully 1.00, to mostly 2.00 higher. Bidding was extremely active from both the packer and kosher buyers right from the start as there was an outstanding supply of high quality cattle on offer. High Choice and Prime cattle were trading from 83.00-85.00 right out of the gate, with kosher buyers willing to pay as much as 88.00 on a few fancy individuals. However, kosher buyers were not the only ones willing to ante-up to own the good ones, as packer buyers were putting loads together with several 80.00-83.00 dollar steers on them. Fat cattle markets across the U.S. posted gains this week, from the July live cattle contract at the CME gaining 3.00 over the past two days to close at 78.30 on Thursday, to the Western cattle feeders managing to move their cattle 3.00 higher from 76.00-78.00. While these markets do not have an overwhelming effect on the Northeastern market, it is still nice to see cattle feeders and packers using black ink on their closeouts no matter what state you call home. The local Holstein steer market was also very good on Thursday, as prices were a full 1.00 higher than Tuesday. The slaughter heifer runs have been light all week, and a trend was never established. Fleshier (65- 80 percent lean) slaughter cows sold 2.00-3.00 higher, with select sales up to 4.00 higher. Lean slaughter cows sold 2.00 higher. Late week cow demand was very good, but was not supported at all by a boneless beef market that was reported over 1.00 lower on Thursday. Slaughter bulls sold 2.00 higher on a run that included nearly 100 head. The supply included 519 head of slaughter steers, 529 slaughter cows, 38 slaughter heifers, 98 slaughter bulls, with 88 head of feeder cattle.

Slaughter Steers: High Choice and Prime 2-4 1105-1485 lbs 82.00-85.60, mostly 83.00-85.00, outstanding singles 86.00-88.00. Holstein Steers: High Choice and Prime 2-3 1335-1585 lbs 71.00-76.00, mostly 71.50-74.50, fancy individuals 75.75-77.25. Choice 2-3 1200-1540 lbs 68.25-70.75. Select and low Choice 2-3 1125-1380 lbs 65.50-68.00. Select 1-2 1210-1305 lbs 64.25-66.00.

Bidding activity was good, on an average size run of Graded Holstein calves. Holstein heifers sold steady to weak with fancier heifers hard to find. The PA Department of Ag graded 495 head of bulls for the graded sale, with an estimated 90 percent of the graded run going back on feed.

Cimarron ALFALFA SR

Top Forage Quality
Cimarron SR produces larger leaves than other alfalfa varieties. (See photo right.) And it holds its leaves better in the field and in the baling process. The result is a leafier hay with higher protein and TDN. Break open a bale of Cimarron hay, and you can see the difference.

High Yields - Long Stand Life
Cimarron SR is producing excellent yields in the Penn State trials. And unlike other alfalfa varieties Cimarron SR was bred on the East Coast, so it stands up well under the difficulties of Eastern conditions. You can count on Cimarron SR for long stand life and top productivity.

Sclerotinia Resistance
Sclerotinia crown rot is a significant problem for alfalfa growers on the East Coast. Cimarron SR provides the protection against sclerotinia that growers need.

Weevil Tolerance
Cimarron SR's unique alfalfa weevil tolerance reduces weevil damage by 50% In a heavy infestation spraying can be cut in half In lighter infestations, spraying can be avoided altogether.

Most lots of 40-60 weight pigs have a sliding value from the negotiated weight basis which is calculated on the actual average weight of the load plus or minus .30-.40 per pound. Some early weaned lots have a slide of .50-1.00 per pound. Early weaned pigs are under 19 days old. Estimated lean value is projected to use slaughter weights with normal confinement feeding conditions. Vaccination and health program values are not included but health status should be disclosed.

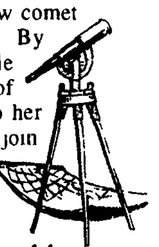
The OLD FARMER'S THIS WEEK WITH ALMANAC

JULY 28–AUGUST 3, 2003

NEW MOON, JULY 29

MY STARS AND COMETS

Nantucket-born astronomer Maria Mitchell entered the galaxy on August 1, 1818 Interest in her father's astronomy hobby drew her to star-gazing, and a natural ability at mathematics took her even further In 1847, while assisting her father in a Coast Guard survey, Maria discovered a new comet and managed to determine its orbit By 1865, she had joined Vassar Female College as its first female professor of astronomy Her discovery also led to her being invited (the first woman ever) to join the American Academy of Arts and Sciences Turns out that having your head in the stars can be good after all



Look bravely up into the sky, and be content with knowing . . .

–Sarah Orne Jewett American writer (1849–1909)

The OLD FARMER'S WEATHER PROVERBS

Five or six fogs in a row and you'll have rain.

A general mist before the Sun rises is a sign of fair weather.

TIP OF THE WEEK

☞ For quicker drying, add a few small, clean, dry towels to your dryer load.

FRIED GREEN TOMATOES

3 medium green tomatoes
1/2 cup cornmeal
salt and pepper, to taste
6 tablespoons oil
1/2 cup sour cream
2 scallions, chopped

Wash, dry, and slice tomatoes into ⅜-inch slices. Dredge them in cornmeal, and sprinkle both sides with salt and pepper. Over moderate heat, heat oil in a large, heavy skillet Add the tomato slices, without crowding. When they start to sizzle, turn them over and brown the other side. They should be just tender—not mushy Remove slices as they are done and keep warm in a 175°F oven with the door slightly open. Serve warm, with a dollop of sour cream and a sprinkling of scallions

Makes 4 servings, as a side dish.

The Dangers Of Summer

Guest Editorial
By Thomas M. Butzler
Clinton County Cooperative Extension

I have always been a big fan of summer weather, but I never realized some of the potential hazards that came along with summer-type conditions, excessive sun exposure, and heat exhaustion. These are conditions many farmers and workers face during the summer months.

As with many youth, I felt infallible. Two experiences when I was a young adult brought me back to reality.

During the summer of 1989, I worked two jobs. One was a groundskeeper on a golf course, from 6 a.m.-2 p.m., followed by a lifeguarding job from 4 p.m.-10 p.m. Many people, including me, thought a deep tan looked good. Sunscreen was used sparingly and I tried to soak up as much sun as possible during those two jobs. Too much sun over several days led to blisters forming on my shoulders. No big deal, I thought.

Until some folks told me about skin cancer. According to the Pennsylvania Department of Health, excessive sun exposure during the first 10 to 20 years of life greatly increases the risk of skin cancer. Blistering sunburns in youth result in an increased risk for developing melanoma.

Medical horror stories always spur me into action and I changed my ways. Be sun-smart and wear loose-fitting, long-sleeved shirts and pants (when practical). Use sunscreen with an SPF rating of 15 or

Editor:

It happened with little fanfare, but once again life got a little tougher for the American farmer. The U.S. House recently voted for repeal of Country of Origin Labels for meat.

Our farmers have a wonderful reputation worldwide for producing the world's best beef. Our government responds by diminishing the competitive advantage of letting consumers know where their beef is coming from. Now with the great wisdom of our congressional leaders, inferior imported beef that isn't as fresh can be passed off as fresh American beef.

I am for free trade, but the end consumer should always have all the knowledge to make his or her own decision. This vote helps keep information from the consumer.

This hits home because we have numerous meat packing fa-

To Monitor Your Dairy Herd For Heat Stress

During these hot and humid days of summer it is important to monitor your dairy herd to evaluate if they need relief from heat stress.

David Bray, dairy specialist at The University of Florida, suggests the following methods. First count the respiration rate of 10 cows. If 8 out of 10 respire at 80 or more breaths per minute, they need additional help with heat stress.

A second method involves taking the rectal temperatures of 10 cows. If 8 out of 10 are 102.5 or greater, they need cooling. Finally if dry matter intake or milk production drops 10 precent or more, they need heat stress abatement.

To Be Aware Of National Trends In Soil Erosion Control

The U.S. Department of Agriculture's Natural Resources Conservation Service (NRCS) recently released results from its new annual National Resources Inventory (NRI). The NRI provides comprehensive and statistically reliable information on various natural resource conditions and trends on nonfederal lands.

Results from the 2001 Annual NRI on cropland soil erosion show some positive trends.

Conservation efforts have reduced soil erosion substantially, from 3.1 billion tons per year in 1982 to 1.8 billion tons per year in 2001. Between 1982 and 2001, sheet and rill erosion (the removal of layers of soil from the land surface by the action of rainfall and runoff) dropped from 4.0 tons per acre per year to 2.7 tons per acre per year. Wind erosion dropped from 3.3 tons per acre per year to 2.1 tons per acre per year during the same period.

Additional results and information on the 2001 Annual NRI are available on the Web at http://www.nrcs.usda.gov/news/.

Results from the 2002 Annual NRI will be released in early 2004 and will include additional national level results and some regional estimates. The spectrum of results will continue to increase as the annual NRI process becomes fully established over the next several years. Future NRIs will look at new topics, including conservation benefits, grazing land condition and soil quality.

To Understand Pennsylvania's New Antlerless Deer License Application Process

Beginning Aug. 4, Pennsylvania hunters will have an opportunity to apply for antlerless deer licenses that will permit them to hunt more territory than before. This marks the first time the Pennsylvania Game Commission will issue antlerless licenses using a system that isn't based on the state's 67 counties since it began selling them 80 years ago.

"Although a lot has changed, much of the application process remains the same," noted Vern Ross, game commission executive director. "Hunters just need to follow directions and mail their applications to the Game Commission using the provided mailing labels. It's really not going to be that difficult."

Some of the changes in the application process include: hunters are applying to hunt in Wildlife Management Units (WMUs) now, not a specific county; applications are mailed to the Game Commission, not county treasurers; pre-printed mailing labels are provided to affix to the application envelope; and the application envelope is now yellow, not pink.

The Game Commission has developed an "Antlerless License Update" page on its website (www.pgc.state.pa.us) to provide hunters additional information about the changes in the antlerless license application process and updates on available antlerless licenses once sales begin. Information on the website will be updated weekly beginning August 7; sell-outs for wildlife management units will be posted immediately. Look under "Hot Topics" on the agency's homepage.

"With the new WMUs in place for this year's deer seasons, hunters will no longer be restricted to unmarked, political county boundaries when hunting antlerless deer," Ross said. "Antlerless licenses will be issued for WMUs, which are defined by easy-to-recognize geographical boundaries — such as major roads and rivers — rather than political lines on a map that can't be seen in the field."

The Game Commission will begin accepting antlerless license applications through the mail from residents on Monday, Aug. 4; nonresident applications will be accepted through the mail starting Monday, Aug. 18. The Game Commission will begin accepting resident and nonresident hunter applications through the mail for the first round of unsold licenses on Monday, Aug. 25; and the second round will be accepted through the mail beginning Monday, Sept. 8.

THE BIBLE SPEAKS

BY LAWRENCE W. ALTHOUSE

WRITE IT DOWN! SPELL IT OUT!

Background Scripture:
Nehemiah 10:28-39.8.
Devotional Reading:
Psalms 66:8-20.

In the 1960s, The Church of the Savior in Washington, D.C. devised a unique approach to church membership. When people joined, their vows were for only one year. Annually, members were asked to renew their vows and those who did not wish to do so were released from membership. Furthermore, their vows were not just the standard one-size-fits-all promises to follow Jesus Christ and support the church, but to do specific things: special training, accept a particular leadership roll, serve as a teacher, and so forth.

This strategy did wonders for the church. Perhaps Nehemiah 10:28-39 gave them the idea, for, in this passage, the people under Nehemiah, having heard the law read to them, make a very specific written covenant which some affirmed and others did not. They promised not to intermarry with the pagan peoples and not buy merchandise on the Sabbath or other holy days, to honor the sabbatical year, to make a yearly payment for the service of the house of God, and to bring the first fruits of all they had to the house of God. His priorities for us today are probably quite different, but "covenanting" together is still valid for Christian fellowship.

Teachers know that learning is faster and more certain when we write down important data. When we write it down it forces us to make concrete and specific what verbally might be quite obscure. If you say, "I promise to follow Jesus Christ," not spelling it out may make the vow quite meaningless. Writing it down helps us to explore what it means to "follow Jesus Christ."

But follow him where? How? When?

Our Commitments

Writing down our resolutions is also important because it gives us the opportunity to remind ourselves of our commitments. If we want to know what we promised to do and be, we need only go back to the written record itself. We may find that we made a promise that we cannot — or will not — keep. So, better to adjust or even withdraw that promise than to forget it and fail to keep it by sheer neglect.

I have long been a strong advocate of a financial pledge to the church. It helps the church anticipate what it will have to work with. But more importantly, it sets a goal for us.

However, a church pledge is not like a business contract — it can be adjusted upward or downward. Early in my ministry, I was involved in stewardship work. I was taught that a church seeking pledges ought also to form a group that will visit members when they are falling far behind on their pledge. After a pledge is made, the person's situation may change so that keeping up the pledge is not possible. People who don't keep up on their pledge feel guilty and that guilt creates a barrier between themselves and the congregation.

Visiting them in a compassionate manner very often saves their participation in the church, for it demonstrates that the church understands their plight. There is no more practical and impressive demonstration of the grace of God.

A Curse And An Oath

This grace is startlingly different from the approach of the covenant in Nehemiah 10, for we read, "... all who have knowledge and understanding, join with their brethren, their nobles, and enter into a curse and an oath to walk in God's law...." (28,29). The "curse" of which they speak here is the curse they pronounce on themselves if they fail to keep their promises. Love and thanksgiving are much better motives than fear and guilt.

A man in one of my parishes was very active and regular in the church. But he refused to "join" the church because he was not sure he could live up to the vows. So, it was only on paper that he was not a member. No one in the church ever regarded him as a "non-member." We agreed to disagree, for I believed and still believe it better to make a commitment I will strive to meet than to fail to make it for fear I may fail to keep it. A commitment makes me try much harder. It probably has the same effect on you.

We all promise to follow Jesus Christ as Lord and Savior, and we probably do a better job of it if we write it down and spell it out.

Your power is OFF... and your generator DIDN'T start.
Now your 40,000 Birds or 2,000 Pigs are DEAD.

Top 5 reasons why your generator may overheat and fail this summer...

- Low Coolant level – engine will not cool properly if coolant is below the core.
- Dirty radiator fins – must be free of dirt, dust, feathers, paper, or debris.
- Sufficient air intake – motorized shutters are strongly recommended.
- Improper coolant mix – 50/50 antifreeze and water will ensure max cooling from coolant.
- Faulty exhaust shutters – must open freely with no flow obstructions.

Here are the 5 things we'll do to help you prevent this disaster...

- We'll perform our "Generator Readiness Evaluation" worth $175 for FREE.*
- We'll detect your potential problems quickly with our trained technician team.
- We'll dispatch our technician with a service van stocked with the most popular service parts.
- We'll recommend a "Preventative Maintenance Program" that best suits your needs.
- We'll respond to emergencies you have 24 hours a day, 7 days a week.

MILK PRODUCTION REPORT BULLISH

- June milk production down 0.1 percent
- June cheese inventories up 1 percent
- Why "Other Solids" price is negative

The June Milk Production report was released on Thursday (July 17) and has already contributed to higher milk prices. Today's Class III futures contracts in Chicago traded 9-11 cents per hundredweight higher for August 2003 through February 2004. Clearly the market reacted bullishly to this USDA report.

The June Milk Production report indicated that milk production for 20 select states was down 0.1 percent. Yield per cow was even with a year ago at 1,587 pounds per cow, but cow numbers dropped 11,000 head from the month before. The revised figures for May indicate that milk production for 20 select states was down 0.4 percent. And milk production for the entire U.S. during the quarter April through June was down 0.3 percent.

This report is significant in that it shows a continued decline in the nation's dairy herd. Cow numbers continue to decline month after month. Cow numbers in California actually dropped 1,000 head in June from the month before. And June milk per cow for California was down from a year ago.

What this report does not tell us is what will happen with milk production for the rest of the year. I expect cow numbers will continue a very modest decline throughout the remainder of the year. But yield per cow could rebound. We simply don't know at this stage.

The Cold Storage report came out today. It indicates how much butter and cheese are in cold storage warehouses. The report indicates that at the end of June 2003, butter inventories were 20 percent ahead of a year ago, American cheese was one percent ahead of a year ago, and Other Natural Cheese was down 5 percent. Except for butter, this report is also bullish on milk prices.

I have received a lot of questions about the negative price for "other solids" that was reported on producer milk checks for June deliveries. This is only for those producers who are in a federal order and are priced on milk components (butterfat, protein, other solids). To the untrained eye, a negative number looks like a deduction from the milk check. Unfortunately, to an economist, this does make sense.

CHARLENE M. SHUPP
Special Correspondent

GRATZ (Dauphin Co.) — On Sunday, July 20, about 80 people gathered at the farm of Andy and Jessica Smeltz for an afternoon of fun, food, and fellowship for the Pennsylvania Farm Bureau's Young Farmer/ Rancher annual picnic.

This year's host farm is a contract poultry operation located in Gratz, Dauphin County.

Established in 1995 as a partnership between Andy and his two brothers, Dale and Larry, their operation includes three chicken houses. When filled to capacity, the Smeltz's can house an estimated 36,000 broiler chickens.

State Young Farmer/Rancher chairperson Shawn Miller of Indiana County recognized Andy, Jessica, and their family for their hard work and planning of the picnic, presenting them with a thank you basket.

Several state FFA officers also joined in the day's festivities. On behalf of the state officer team, 2003-04 Pennsylvania State FFA President, Eric Rubenstein, "thanked the Farm Bureau for inviting them" and for the opportunity to learn more about the Young Farmer/Rancher Program. Joining Eric at the event was State Chaplain Jason Klouser, Western Region State Vice President Becky Hedges, and State Reporter Bernadette Nace.

More than 80 people gathered at the farm of Andy and Jessica Smeltz for the Pennsylvania Farm Bureau's Young Farmer/Rancher picnic. The Smeltz's operate a contract poultry operation in Gratz, Dauphin County.

Wyatt, 16, is the son of Chris and Crystal Wyatt and is a student at Lake Forest High School.

Wyatt has been showing dairy animals "as long as I can remember," he said.

Following are results of the four livestock shows:

Ag Innovations Showcased In Cecil County, Maryland

DAVE LEFEVER
Lancaster Farming Staff

FAIR HILL, Md. — Studies in Maryland show that seeding rates for corn, soybeans, and wheat can often be reduced somewhat without hurting yields.

That was one of the research findings farmers heard about at the Cecil County Ag Showcase this week. The event, put on by Maryland Cooperative Extension, took place on farmland near the Cecil County Fairgrounds, in conjunction with the fair.

"There's been a lot of emphasis the last few years to keep those (plant) populations up," said Bob Kratochvil, Maryland extension specialist. But Maryland farmers shouldn't always necessarily go along with recommended rates, he noted.

With corn, for example, much of the research is done in midwestern states, where soils are better suited for top corn yields. Recommendations of 30-35,000 plants per acre for grain production can be on the high side for Maryland, according to Kratochvil.

He recommends shooting for populations of 24-28,000 corn plants/acre for grain production. On the most productive soils or with irrigation, farmers could do well with poulations of up to 32,000 plants per acre, he said.

Corn silage producers should aim for populations of 35-40,000 plants/acre.

For soybeans, Maryland agronomists have long recommended 175,000 seeds/acre for conventional plantings, but a recent three-year study indicates yields are practically as strong when the seeding rate is cut to 140,000 seeds/acre.

"Soybeans have a tremendous ability to compensate for low plant populations," Kratochvil said.

In double-cropping systems, he suggested seeding rates of 180,000 seeds/acre, down 20 percent from previous recommendations.

And, while high seeding rates for wheat encourage good primary tiller development, studies have also shown that wheat seeding rates can also be reduced without a significant effect on yields.

A 2002 study on two Maryland farms showed that a fairly wide range of populations yielded the same number of bushels/acre.

Ag Showcase visitors view a baling demonstration.

On one of the research farms, populations of 17, 20, and 23 plants per row foot yielded the same harvest. Populations of 10 and 13 plants per foot, however, yielded less.

One the other farm, all the test populations from 10 to 23 plants per foot produced the same yields.

Kratochvil recommends aiming for 17 viable seeds per foot — or 125 million seeds/acre. That's down from previous recommendations of 1.5 million seeds/acre, and can save farmers $3-6 per acre on seed costs.

He also discussed this year's generally poor wheat crop. The rainy spring weather was largely responsible for low test weights and high levels of scab found in wheat throughout the region, he said.

Yields ranged from 20-55 bushels/acre, with test weights as low as 20 pounds/bushel — a third of the standard test weight for wheat.

Scott Rowe shows multiflora rose plots he used in study on how to better control this invasive plant.

The Ag Showcase offered farmers the chance to witness some new hay handling equipment in action, talk to equipment dealers, see a lineup of antique tractors, hear a safety talk on "hidden hazards on the farm," and check out the results of a multiflora rose control study conducted onsite.

Scott Rowe, ag and natural resources extension educator in Cecil County, showed the effects that various herbicides, mechanical, and biological controls had on multiflora rose thickets.

Three different herbicides — Hi-Dep 2,4-D; Roundup; and Ally were applied to multiflora rose plots in May 2002.

Plots were also treated mechanically, either alone or in conjunction with herbicide treatments. This included standard mowing, and also handling the rose thickets with a MeriCrusher, a piece of equipment that is similar to an asphalt grinder, Rowe noted.

The MeriCrusher did "a good job of tearing out the rose, grinding it up, and incorporating much of the trash into the soil," according to Rowe. The MeriCrusher also provided a seedbed that allowed good establishment of newly-seeded pasture mix.

Both in conjunction with an herbicide or when used alone, the MeriCrusher treatment has allowed "very little rose regrowth" to date.

Goats and sheep can also provide excellent control "as these animals will go right past 'good' grass to get to multiflora rose."

For more information, contact Rowe at (410) 996-5280.

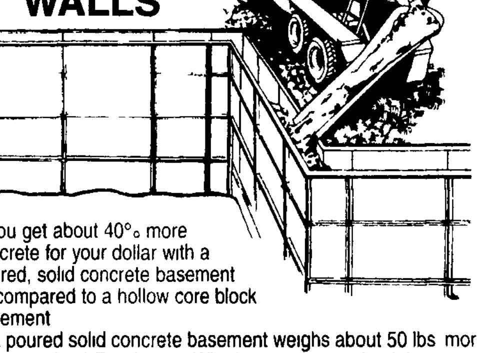
POURED CONCRETE WALLS



You get about 40% more concrete for your dollar with a poured, solid concrete basement as compared to a hollow core block basement

A poured solid concrete basement weighs about 50 lbs more per cubic foot! Far denser What's more, poured solid concrete walls are monolithic there are no joints!

This is why laboratory tests show poured, solid concrete basements have many times the flexural and compressive strength to withstand the side and down pressures caused by earth, wind, water and building loads and the material density to resist water penetration

Best of all, thanks to modern and efficient construction techniques, poured, solid concrete basements are competitively priced

National Feeder Cattle Weekly Review

St. Joseph, Mo.

July 18, 2003

Report Supplied By USDA

NATIONAL FEEDER & STOCKER CATTLE SUMMARY - Week Ending July 18 — NATIONAL FEEDER & STOCKER CATTLE SUMMARY — Total Receipts: 327,000; last week 422,000; last year 288,900. Direct: 111,000; last week 111,500; last year 91,100. Video/Internet: none; last week 145.900; last year none. Auctions: 216,000, last week 165,400; last year 197,800. This week's reported auction volume included 40 percent over 600 lbs and 43 percent heifers.

Compared to last week, feeder cattle and calves sold steady to 2.00 higher as prices continue to defy the laws of financial physics. The only major market that did not post a higher trend was the Oklahoma National Stockyards, but much of this was attributed to heavier receipts and full weigh-ups on plainer-quality offerings. Southeastern auction markets were also mixed, but not too far on either side of steady. Lofty price levels are coaxing large strings of cattle to market earlier than normal. Also, hot winds and mercury readings in the triple-digits are rapidly drying-out pastures in the central sections of the United States. Droves of yearlings are starting to move from once-lush pastures in the Osage and Flint Hills grazing regions. Many of these cattle have already been sold in the country but some will seek refuge from the heat in local salebarns, where a refreshing breeze is coming from the flapping of buyers cards. The best demand continues to come from the Western Cornbelt, where moisture conditions remain adequate and corn farmers are expecting a bin buster of a crop.

Commercial feedlot buyers are trying to steer clear of the farmer feeders, but aggressive fed cattle marketing has left empty pens and a dire need for replacements. A good buying opportunity is this weeks Superior Video Auction, where nearly a quarter of a million feeder cattle are on offer. Early yearling steer sales were evenly split on each side of the 90.00 mark.

The Canadian border issue has had little effect on feeder cattle prices, but the fat cattle market continues to hang on every official word on the expected reopening. This past week, feedlots were threatened into accepting lower bids on Tuesday, by a scheduled late-week announcement on the border issue that ended-up being postponed. A lifting of the beef product import ban is inevitable, but until then producers on both sides of the border are a slave to the issue.

East Fluid Milk And Cream Review

Madison, Wis.

July 23, 2003

Report Supplied by USDA

SPOT PRICES OF CLASS II CREAM, dollars per lb butterfat: F.O.B. producing plants: Northeast: 1.6269-1.9184. Delivered Equivalent: Atlanta: 1.6392-1.8820 mostly 1.6968-1.8213.

PRICES OF CONDENSED SKIM, dollars per lb. wet solids, F.O.B. producing plants: Northeast: Class II, includes monthly formula prices: .8500-.9300. Class III, spot prices: 1.000-1.0500.

SPOTS SHIPMENTS OF GRADE A MILK: FLORIDA: This Week: In 0, Out 51; Last Week In 0, Out 51; Last Week In 48, Out 2. SOUTHEAST STATES: This Week: In 0, Out 0; Last Week In 0, Out 0; Last Week In 0, Out 0.

EDITOR'S NOTE: Due to changes in milk supply agreements, milk import/export totals are not directly comparable to year ago figures and to shipments prior to April 1, 2003.

During June, milk production in the 20 major states totaled 12.33 billion pounds, down 0.1% from June 2002. The following are the June-to-June changes for selected states: Texas [7] .3%, New York -2.7%, Vermont -3.9%, Pennsylvania - 4.3%, Virginia -6.4%, Florida -8.0%, and Kentucky -9.8%.

This week, milk production continues to ease in most areas of the region. Fluid milk supplies are mixed, but mostly lighter. Milk sales are occurring at a premium to Class prices, which is typical for this time of year. Bottled milk sales range from sluggish in the Northeast to fairly good in the Southeast.

It doesn't seem possible, bottlers in the Southeast are already preparing for school lunch business. Some year-round schools are starting up next week and most public schools will be starting their new year the second week of August. Surplus milk volumes moving to manufacturing plant are lighter and many plants are operating on greatly reduced schedules. Some Southeastern plants have been idled until milk volumes bounce back.

In the Northeast, manufacturing plants are also running on lighter schedules due to incoming volumes of milk.

The condensed skim market is unchanged. Demand for Class III is slowing as prices have moved above a dollar per pound solids. Many users are switching or have switched to NDM. Powder at 84-86 cents per pounds can save Class III users a lot of money. Class II prices are mostly steady. August's advanced Class II skim milk price was up only two cents from July, which will mean that Class II condensed skim price will hold relatively steady.

The fluid cream market is temporarily weaker. A butter manufacturer has their churn down this week and more cream is on the market. However, when it gets going again next week, cream will tighten back up. Some cream suppliers do have extra cream to move this week and multiples eased after being very high for early week deliveries. Some of the high multiples were based on how tight cream was last week and, as cream became available early this week, multiples eased somewhat. The higher multiples and the 4.75-cent jump in the CME average have combined to push prices sharply higher this week. Demand is mostly steady. Ice cream and ice cream mix production are seasonally heavy. Soft serve mix sales are very good and typical for this time of year. Bottled cream sales are slowing in some areas and spot cream needs in this sector of the market are off slightly. Cream cheese production is mostly steady, but increasing cream prices are a deterrent to spot sales.

more (I slather it on these days). Wear sunglasses with UV protection. Wear a wide-brimmed hat that protects the face, ears, and back of the neck (baseball hats don't give you very good protection). If possible, seek shade when the sun is most intense and damaging (10 a.m.-4 p.m.). (My wife tells me I look like a ghost during the summer, but I hope to head off any future problems.)

I thought I had wizened up a bit. I applied sunscreen anytime I was in the sun and usually wore a wide brimmed hat. However, my next life lesson dealt not with sun exposure but the handling of summer heat.

I was living in North Carolina at the time and needed some respite from working in the peanut fields. In order to relive some of my New Hampshire trail crew days, I decided to crank out a 40-mile hike (in June). I thought I took enough liquid, water and Gatorade, but just didn't think through the effect of excessive exercise on a hot and humid summer day.

Fourteen miles into the hike I was becoming dizzy and nauseous. I drank all my water but couldn't stomach the Gatorade; staying hydrated was becoming a problem. At mile marker 16, I turned around and headed for the car. This was my first experience with heat exhaustion. On the way back to the car, every stream became a place for me to submerge my whole body into the cooling waters.

According to researchers at Penn State, heat exhaustion is caused by a loss of body fluids and salts from sweating, and decreased blood flow to the brain and other organs. Symptoms include cool, pale, clammy skin; dizziness; headache; cramps; nausea or vomiting; weakness; confusion; or even unconsciousness. To treat heat exhaustion, move the victim to a cool place, elevate his/her feet, and call for medical help immediately. If the victim is able to drink, give him/her plenty of cool fluids while waiting for help to arrive.

The best thing to do is avoid placing yourself in the position where you need medical help. Some suggestions are: Seek shade when outside (or create shade, such as placing an umbrella over you as you work); avoid staying in the direct sun for more than 15 minutes, unless you are wearing a hat; increase the amount of water you drink in the summer; minimize your consumption of alcohol (it dehydrates the body); avoid wearing thick clothing in the summer; and avoid physical exertions during the mid-day when it is likely to be the hottest.

Basically, use common sense. For example, don't apply pesticides in the middle of the day as it requires you to wear personal protective equipment (extra clothing) and if a backpack sprayer, a great deal of physical exertion.

Tomatoes can develop a physiological disorder called "sunscald." This is caused by high temperatures with a lot of sunshine, damaging tomato fruit as it is developing. If these summer conditions can injure your vegetable crops, imagine what they are doing to your skin and health! Take proper precautions and have a healthy growing season.

cilities in Lancaster County. Their life just got tougher also. I'm OK with competition, but the consumer must have the right to be informed.

I wonder what the hidden agenda is. Is it the political action groups that represent nationwide grocery chains looking to pass inferior products by consumers? Was there a back room deal with Brazil where much of the imported beef is produced? I can't be sure. What I do know is that once again life got harder for the American farmer, a group of people who clearly work the hardest.

This bill has to make it through the Senate. I hope they have a little more wisdom.

Editor:

I am a dairy farmer and schoolteacher. I am very disgusted about the way the dairy industry is being kicked by everyone. It took from the first of September until May to get a milk machine installed into the school where I teach. Four weeks after an article was printed in the Country Focus, the students were drinking over 40 pints per day.

Our school is rural with less than 250 students from grades 6 through 12. This would equate to almost an additional million pounds of milk per day for just Pennsylvania alone. In addition, they charge $1 for a pint of milk. That is a healthy profit. USDA complains about milk storage. I cannot think of a better place to store milk than in a student's stomach.

If we are going to have money taken from our milk checks why not provide milk for our school children? Cheese snacks could be provided in the machine; vending machines can be built to dispense any product.

Everyone says advertise. Why advertise if the product is not available? This is good for the students and if they drink milk now, they will drink in the future. I challenge every dairy farmer who pays school taxes to demand a milk and cheese machine in every school. Take a grip on your industry, I dare each farmer to act now and have a machine in each school by Sept. 1.

Editor:

Your July 12 "State of CWT" editorial refers to a National Farmers Union (NFU) news item about "parity." Parity, as you describe, is the price farmers would receive for a product if farm prices had increased at the same rate as expenses. NFU uses 1910-1914 as a base period. This was the historic base period which was included in the Agricultural Adjustment Act of 1933 for computing parity for selected products.

The definition of the parity concept, however, causes problems because it does not take into account changes in demand, supply, product substitution, and resource productivity over time. To allow for such changes, the calculation of parity price was modified, by Congress, in the Agricultural Act of 1948. This act changed the base period for calculating parity prices for individual farm products to average prices over the most recent 10 years to reflect the changing relationship among the different farm commodities as mentioned in the USDA Marketing Yearbook of Agriculture of 1954.

Reman Bale Stacker

Saving you time, manpower and equipment

Timing is everything especially when it comes to haying. There are so many uncontrollable variables like, weather, temperature and time—that is until now. The Reman Bale Stacker gets your bales off the field quicker than any other system. Not only does its patented system save you time, it frees up manpower and equipment.

So now whether you are trying to maintain the moisture of your forage or beat the rain to your hay. The Reman Bale Stacker is the answer for you.

With the Reman you only need one man, one tractor and the Bale Stacker. Each bale is picked up and stacked in a sturdy twelve bale stack every time.

The Bale Stacker is a remarkably adaptable machine. Designed for the field, it is able to pick up bales without problems—even under difficult operating conditions. It's simple operation allows you to follow the path of the baler and pick up bales as fast as they are made, avoiding time-costly cross-tracking.

Its unique design also allows you to pick up different lengths of bales without adjustments to the machine between loads.

When it's time to unload, the rear deck tips all twelve bales effortlessly into a tight freestanding stack without any other equipment or manpower in less than a minute.

Each feature of the Reman Bale Stacker is designed with the end user in mind. From durability and adaptability to safety and performance the Reman Bale Stacker was designed and built for you.

The patented clamp and kicker keeps bales under constant control, not relying on bale free-fall for proper system functioning.

Weekly Dairy Market Outlook

You will recall that USDA just announced changes in the formulas used to compute milk prices. These formulas determine component prices based on wholesale commodity prices. For June, the prices for commodities were: butter $1.0797 per pound; nonfat dry milk $0.8040 per pound; cheese $1.1464 per pound, and dry whey $0.1396 per pound. These commodity prices are then used with the formulas to determine component values for butterfat, protein, and other solids. The June component values showed up on producer milk checks in July. We all know what butterfat and protein are. Other dairy solids consist mainly of lactose and some minerals.

The new formula for "other solids" is pretty simple. Take the price of dry whey and subtract $0.159 per pound. This is the "make allowance." It covers the cost of processing dry whey. Then multiply the resulting figure by 1.03, or the yield factor. You should come up with a figure of -$0.02 per pound, exactly what is on your milk check.

There are two reasons why this figure is negative. First, the make allowance and yield factor were slightly lowered in the new formulas. Second, the price of dry whey plummeted from $0.268 per pound at the latter half of 2001 to a low of $0.14 per pound in recent weeks. So the market value of dry whey exceeds the cost of processing it. If we did not change the other solids formula, the price of this component would have been -$0.0004 per pound, still negative.

The more important dollar figures on the milk check are what producers get for butterfat and protein. The price of butterfat for June was $1.1576 per pound. By my calculations, had we kept the old formulas, producers would have received two cents more per pound for butterfat. The protein price for June was $1.9434 per pound. I computed that this price was over eight cents per pound higher due to the new formulas.

My conclusion is that producers are receiving more for protein and slightly less for butterfat and other solids. As long as dry whey prices remain low, the price for the other solids component on the milk check will be negative. Producers can offset this slight deduction by producing more protein or butterfat. As far as the formula change is concerned, most dairy producers are probably better off with the change.

NFU Airs Frustration On COOL Ruling

WASHINGTON, D.C. — National Farmers Union expressed its dismay at the U.S. House of Representatives' recent narrow defeat of legislation to uphold mandatory country-of-origin meat labeling.

The House rejected by a 15-vote margin an amendment to the fiscal year 2004 agriculture appropriations bill that Reps. Dennis Rehberg, R-Mont., and Darlene Hooley, D-Ore., introduced to protect implementation funding for mandatory country-of-origin labeling for beef, pork, lamb and fish. Without the amendment, the House bill essentially prevents the U.S. Department of Agriculture from implementing meat labeling by the September 2004 deadline.

"National Farmers Union, and the farmers and ranchers we represent, are disappointed by the House decision; however, this vote could have easily gone the other way," said NFU President Dave Frederickson. "Less than a majority of House members voted to block the funding for country-of-origin labeling, and 33 members had not made it back from their districts to vote.

"The Rehberg-Hooley amendment came close to winning despite the active opposition of the House majority leadership, President Bush, Agriculture Secretary Veneman and the giant meatpackers," said Frederickson. "They may have won this round, but our fight to protect this beneficial law is far from over.

Sign-Up For New Crop Disaster Program 2003

LANCASTER (Lancaster Co.) — Sign-up for the Crop Disaster Program (CDP) for the 2001 or 2002 crop is now underway. The closing date for sign-up will be announced at a later date, but producers will be given ample opportunity to complete the process.

Payments for CDP are authorized by the Agricultural Assistance Act of 2003, signed into law on Feb. 20, to provide some $2 billion in aid for producers suffering from natural disasters. The CDP has no funding limitation, but each producer is limited to $80,000.

Under CDP, producers will be reimbursed for qualifying crop production and quality losses to crops for either the 2001 or 2002 crops. Payments will be issued for losses exceeding 35% of expected production at:

- 50 percent of the established price for crops that were covered by crop insurance;
- 50 percent of the established price for crops for which crop insurance was not available; and
- 45 percent of the established price to producers for crops that could have been insured but were not.

The statute requires 2001 and 2002 crop disaster payments for production and quality losses to be calculated by the same formula and loss thresholds used for the 2000 crop disaster program. This means the prices used to calculate disaster payments for crops insured under the Federal Crop Insurance Program will be the Actual Production History (APH) prices. For crops not insured, five-year average market prices will be used.

The statute also requires the 2001 or 2002 crop disaster payments be reduced if the sum of: the disaster payment; the net crop insurance indemnity; and the value of the crop that was not lost, exceeds 95 percent of what the value of the crop would have been in the absence of a loss. Payments will be made to producers shortly after sign-up begins.

For more information about CDP and other disaster assistance, contact your county FSA office.

State Farm Bureau Urges More Affordable Telecommunications For Agriculture

STATE COLLEGE (Centre Co.) — Citing growing technology needs on farms ranging from satellite communications to global positions systems (GPS) that monitor field crop production, the Pennsylvania Farm Bureau has called for passage of legislation to make telecommunications systems more available and affordable in rural areas.

The need was described by Caressa Crone, a Farm Bureau leader and Northumberland County pork producer, during a public forum convened in State College, Monday, by Pennsylvania House Consumer Affairs Chairman Raymond Bunt, (R 147th Dist.).

"Unfortunately, many of rural Pennsylvania's communities are not provided affordable access to today's telecommunications infrastructure," Crone said. "Although the use of satellite services on our farm has been helpful, it continues to be very expensive. Other services would provide us even greater efficiency in our production practices, but the cost can't be justified."

Crone cautioned that rural businesses and communities will lag behind suburban and urban areas in economic development unless measures are taken to provide greater access to telecommunications technology.

Speaking on behalf of the Pennsylvania Farm Bureau, Crone called for passage of House Bill 1669, which is sponsored by Rep. Brett Feese (R-Lycoming). The legislation would strengthen local telephone competition for affordable rates and motivate telecommunication companies to more rapidly extend systems to rural areas. The measure would also establish a telecommunications fund for grants to local communities and provide for automatic enrollment in "Lifeline", ensuring access to life-saving phone services throughout Pennsylvania for low-income residents.

"We believe that passage of House Bill 1669 will significantly increase the chances that Pennsylvania's rural businesses, schools, hospitals and homes will not be left behind in today's information age," Crone concluded.

Crone and her husband Richard, with other family members, operate Pine Hurst Acres, a 2,500 acre livestock and grain farm near Danville.

Rutter's Guernseys Honored As Top Milk Producing Guernsey Herd

Terri Johnson with Lily, the American Guernsey "Milk Flow Queen" for 2002.

YORK (York Co.) — Rutter's Dairy, York, is home of the top milk-producing Guernsey herd in Pennsylvania and the eighth highest herd in the nation. This is the fourth straight year Rutter's received the Gold Star breeders' award at the recent National Guernsey Convention in Wisconsin. Only 21 herds in the nation received this award.

Rutter's Dairy is also home to "Lily", the second place Guernsey in the country based on her milk production and appearance. Lily was bestowed the honor of "Milk Flow Queen" for 2002 by the American Guernsey Cattle Club.

Lily also tied for the seventh highest milk-producing Guernsey in the country and was first in the nation for milk production among Guernseys shown by junior breeders (breeders under 21 years of age).

Lily is shown by Terri Johnson, daughter of Tommy and Cindy Rutter Johnson and granddaughter of Leo and Marge Rutter.

The trio of Lily, her mother, and her sister placed third in the country for their combined milk production records.

Dairy Grazier To Host Pasture Walk

WATSONTOWN (Northumberland Co.) — David Zook will host a pasture walk on his Watsontown farm Aug. 8 from 10 a.m. to noon.

Zook intensively grazes 50 Holsteins on 50 acres of pasture, and makes about 25 acres of hay.

Pasture species on the farm include orchardgrass, perennial ryegrass, bromegrass, and clovers.

The farm is located north of Dewart. From Rt. 405, turn onto Musser Lane and travel a quarter mile to the first farm on the left. From Rt. 54, a few miles west of I-180, take Musser lane to the the west and go 1.75 miles to farm on the right.

Producers attending the pasture walk are urged to take biosecurity precautions: wear different shoes than those worn around home cattle, and wear clothing that has been laundered since being around cattle.

What Retail Produce Marketing Is About!

John Berry
Agricultural Marketing Educator
Lehigh County
Cooperative Extension

The incentive to be a retail marketer is obvious. The closer you can get to retail customers, the more retail dollars go in your pocket instead of the middleman.

If you want to sell retail, you have to provide services the wholesalers, packagers, distributors and retailers provide.

This article reviews some of the key details of operating a direct-to-the-consumer produce marketing enterprise.

Visual Display

Fresh produce is responsible for creating the image of a store. Proper presentation of products increases sales. Shoppers receive a positive impression if products are top quality, clean, and tastefully displayed.

Remember that high-quality products are the strength of produce markets.

A lively, well-stocked produce department entices the customer to buy and increases sales and profits. Think of yourself as an artist, with several palettes of colors to choose from: visual (color, contrast, shape, size), smell (herbs, fruits), and touch (soft or firm).

Make displays that look like they came from the farm. Wooden crates or boxes work well. Baskets are beautiful; slant them toward the customer.

Even an attractive tablecloth can add to your sales. Stair-stepped displays create an array of depth, color and texture; however, they may not be easy for the customer to reach or easy to restock.

Utilize vertical space by hanging products from slings or hangers.

Merchandising

"Pile it high and kiss it goodbye!"

Full, well-stocked displays make customers want to come and get it. Customers don't like taking the last of something from a bare, picked-over display; they want the best.

A cornucopia of produce conveys abundance, prosperity, and quality. Never overstock, however, to prevent the risk of crushing tender items on the bottom.

For most products, avoid piling them higher than six or eight inches — they might bruise or tumble. Avoid steep pyramid displays, for instance, where products continuously roll off the top.

Stock fully, but not so picture perfect that customers hesitate to disrupt the display by removing produce. Removing one or two may even help customers start buying.

Make it easy for the customers to reach for the produce. Your display should be no more than an arm's reach in depth, and between knee- or waist-level and eye-level in height. Don't put your merchandise on the ground.

Instead of placing your boxes flat, try slanting your produce to give the customer a more pleasing visual sense of your product.

Organize products in related groupings. Such groups might include dessert items, salad items, cooking vegetables, apples and pears, etc. Displaying compatible products together serves as a suggestion for additional purchases and uses of the products.

Place high demand items in strategic locations throughout the market. Large displays attract attention, so use bulk displays to generate sales, especially for high-volume seasonal crops such as apples or corn.

Use color and texture to enhance eye appeal. People enjoy food with their senses, so displays must be eye- and sense-appealing. Mix a row of radishes between the mustard and kale, tomatoes between the lettuce and cukes, or intersperse peaches with blueberries to create dazzling color displays.

Good color groupings:

- Red and yellow or green
- Light green with yellow or purple
- Dark green with red, orange or yellow

If you don't have a lot of variety, create a color mixture with flowers or signs.

Creative touches can enliven a produce display, e.g., carrot wheels, fresh flower bouquets, garden-like groupings of lettuce and greens, baskets in displays, or hand stacked yams.

Seasonal themes work well on dry tables, such as fall squash and yam displays, or summertime berries. Produce has its best flavor, holding qualities, and overall value in season, when it is available at its greatest volume and lowest price.

Price signs

Prices should be clearly marked on or near the display. Most shoppers are in a hurry and will not search out the manager to find out how much something costs.

Restock displays frequently, rotate products as needed, and remove damaged, decayed, or unsaleable products promptly. Unsightly produce left on your stand not only detracts from sales, but it leaves the customer with the notion that you sell rotten produce. If you'd buy it, leave it, if not, pull it out.

10 Rules Of Customer Service

Of course, an abundant supply of customers makes retailing a little easier.

One component of ensuring a steady stream of buyers is effective customer service.

Good customer service skills can be learned. As you consider the following customer service guidelines, remember back to a particularly pleasant, or unpleasant, customer service encounter you may have experienced.

1. The customer is never an interruption to your work. The customer is your real reason for being in business. Chores can wait.

2. Greet every customer with a friendly smile. Customers are people and they like friendly contact. They usually return it.

3. Call customers by name. Make a game of learning customers' names.

See how many you can remember.

4. Remember, you are the company! As an owner and an employee, the way you represent yourself to your customer is the way your business will be perceived by that customer.

5. Never argue with customers. The customer is always right (in his or her eyes). Be a good listener; agree where you can, and do what you can to make the customer happy.

6. Never say "I don't know." If you don't know the answer to a question say, "That's a good question. Let me see if I can find out for you."

7. Remember, every dollar you earn comes from the customer's pockets.

Treat them like the boss.

8. State things in a positive way. It takes practice, but will help you become a better communicator.

9. Try to get your customers to remember a good experience at your market.

10. Always go that extra mile. Always do just a little more than the customer expects.

New Members Appointed To USDA Committee

WASHINGTON, D. C. — Agriculture Secretary Ann M. Veneman recently announced the appointment of five new members to the U.S. Department of Agriculture's Advisory Committee on Emerging Markets.

Newly appointed are: Gail R. Carlson of Arlington, Va.; Geralyn C. Contini of Baton Rouge, La.; Harriett A. Paul of Tallahassee, Fla.; John F. Tarburton of Dover, Del.; and James J. Willrett of Malta, Ill. These new members will join the other 15 members currently serving on the committee.

The committee reviews funding proposals under the Emerging Markets Program, which is managed by USDA's Foreign Agricultural Service. This program supports private and governmental projects to promote U.S. agricultural exports in emerging economies.

The committee also advises USDA on the U.S. private sector's efforts to enhance food and rural business systems in developing countries. Congress reauthorized this program in the 2002 Farm Bill.

Committee members must have expertise in international agriculture, trade and development, especially as they relate to emerging market economies. They serve without compensation

Wool Council Finalizes FY 2004 Budget

At meetings in Denver, Colo. last week, the American Sheep Industry Association's (ASI) Wool Council finalized the Wool Trust Budget for FY 2003-2004 and recommended approval by the ASI board of directors.

Preliminary work began by hearing proposal updates from industry associations awarded funding through the wool outreach program in FY 2002-2003. Wool program updates were also presented by companies working with ASI on market research and promotion, quality improvement, information, wool producer planning, U.S. wool strategy and program development. The wool foundation and administration were also approved.

Executive Board Meets in Denver

The executive board meeting of the American Sheep Industry Association (ASI) was called to order by President Guy Flora at 1 p.m. on July 11 in Denver, Colo.

A priority item on the agenda was the approval of the FY 2003-2004 Wool Trust budget and the approval of the FY 2003-2004 dues budget. Both budgets are recommended for approval by the ASI Board. A mail ballot will be sent to the Board of Directors next month for full board approval.

Committee reports included an update by Janet Mawhinney, chair of the Legislative Action Council, concerning the one-year extension of the Lamb Market Adjustment Assistance Program. To date, 24 U.S. senators and numerous U.S. representatives have backed ASI by communicating their support to extend the LMAAP program to the USDA. Chairman Henry Bonilla (R-TX) included language in the FY 04 appropriations bill urging USDA to extend the retained ewe-lamb program for an additional year.

Tentatively set for Sept. 23 and 24 in Washington, D.C., is the second Lamb Summit between the sheep industries of Australia, New Zealand, and the U.S. The board worked toward developing an agenda for this gathering that would be beneficial to the U.S. sheep industry. Potential topics for discussion at this upcoming meeting include pharmaceuticals, quality improvement, and an inquiry into which markets and programs are showing increased lamb demand for Australia and New Zealand. It was agreed that Guy Flora and Cleve Dumdi will select the U.S. participants for the Sept. meeting.

The Minor Usage Minor Species legislation was discussed. Adding a tax incentive component to the language of the bill would provide additional incentive to pharmaceutical companies to label products for the U.S. sheep industry.

Margaret Soulen-Hinson updated the board on the progress of the sheep insurance project. ASI is seeking funds to assist in the development of an insurance program.

A priority for the sheep industry is to finalize completion of its emergency communication plan in the event an animal health issue arises. The board will continue to explore the best avenues in the development of this substantial communications plan.

A national animal health identification plan is being discussed by many in industry and government, which generated considerable discussion, questions, and concerns at the meeting. ASI is represented on the national committee and agreed to communicate with the organizers of the plan that the sheep industry will continue to participate in this endeavor but that endorsement of the proposed rule would be held until publication of the plan.

The next meeting of the ASI Executive Board is tentatively scheduled for Oct. 24-25.

Agriculture Appropriations Update

During consideration of the House Agricultural Appropriations bill, U.S. Reps. Dennis Rehberg (R-MT) and Darlene Hooley (D-OR) offered an amendment to allow the USDA to continue the process of implementing country-of-origin labeling, which was signed into law last Congress as part of the Farm Bill.

The Rehberg-Hooley Amendment was designed to counteract the language included in the appropriations bill which would eliminate funding to the USDA for COOL implementation on all meat products for a year.

The Rehberg-Hooley Amendment failed by a narrow margin — 208 against, 193 for.

The Senate Agricultural Appropriations Subcommittee marked up and approved the FY 2004 Agricultural Appropriations bill on July 15 without any restrictions on funding for the labeling rules. Full Senate Committee action is also expected this week.

Border Updates

On May 20, the Canadian Food Inspection Agency reported a single case of bovine spongiform encephalopathy (BSE) prompting a ban on the importation of all live ruminants and ruminant meat and meat products. While the investigation and discussions between the two countries continue, the border between the U.S. and Canada remains closed.

Also of concern to the U.S. sheep industry is the slow-down of lamb imports into Mexico. Mexico normally buys the majority of the U.S. supply of adult sheep. Thus, the slowdown at the southern border is resulting in reduced prices for adult sheep.

The American Sheep Industry Association (ASI) has been actively working with the appropriate agencies to assist in a resolution to these border issues. ASI will relay any new information to its members as it becomes available.

FMD in Bolivia and Paraguay

Within the last week, both Bolivia and Paraguay have reported outbreaks of foot and mouth disease. Bolivia confirmed four cases while Paraguay confirmed 13. The infected animals in both countries will be destroyed and many more will be closely monitored.

Australian Lamb Exports Drop in 2002-2003

Financial year export statistics released by Agriculture, Forestry, and Fisheries Australia revealed that lamb exports declined 10 percent in 2002-2003. A combination of high domestics prices, continued shortage of heavy export lambs and the rapidly appreciating Australian dollar are quoted as the causes of this drop.

A drought-induced shortage of suitable heavy lambs for the U.S. market saw lamb exports to the U.S. drop 5 percent.

New Technique Has Potential for Wool

The Australian Broadcasting Corporation reported this week that a new technique which eliminates two steps in the wool manufacturing process could open a new market for wool growers.

The new technology, called 'non-woven wool,' does not need to be spun or woven.

Dr. Len Stephens, Chief Executive of Australian Wool Innovations, said it will provide an alternative to polar fleece and can be used to make any kind of soft padding.

Weekly National Market Prices for Wool

The USDA posted prices for wool for the week beginning July 16, can be accessed at: http://www.fsa.usda.gov/pas/FullStory.asp?StoryID=1300. These rates are used to determine the loan repayment rates for marketing assistance loans and to calculate loan deficiency payments.

Pasture Walk To Explore Small-Scale, Diversified Farming

BERKSHIRE, N.Y. — Kingbird Farm will host a pasture walk here July 30. Kingbird Farm is a small, horse-powered farm on a forested hillside in Tioga County, N.Y.

Now in their seventh year of production, farmers Michael and Karm Glos produce a diverse array of certified organically raised meats, produce, and value-added items. Their products include certified organic beef, chicken, turkey, eggs, herbs, and produce (onions, garlic, shallots, scallions, potatoes, and other vegetables). They also seasonally raise pork outdoors on certified organic pasture and certified organic grains. Field work is done with their Percheron and Haflinger horses. Kingbird Farm is certified organic by NOFA-NY Certified Organic LLC (a USDA accredited certifier) for produce, pastures, chickens, turkeys, and eggs.

Pasture walk topics will include fencing and shelter for different species of livestock, rotating multiple species of livestock on shared pasture, and planning grazing needs to coincide with marketing.

For more information and to pre-register, contact Sharon VanDeuson at Cornell Cooperative Extension-Cortland County at (607) 753-5078. For more information about Kingbird Farm visit www.kingbirdfarm.com. For more information on a variety of small farm topics, visit www.smallfarms.cornell.edu.

Breeds Conservancy Issues Alert For Showing Animals

PITTSBORO, N. C. — Is there anything more fun than taking your animals to a show or fair? You not only get to show off that prize ewe or doe, you get to see all of your friends' best animals too.

Showing is a good way to promote conservation priority breeds because they are before the eyes of interested people and looking their best.

It's a lot of work but it's worth it, and this year there is one more thing to add to your show "To Do" list — make sure you're in compliance with the new Scrapes Eradication Rules. · The bottom line is that exhibitors need to fully comply with official scrapie identification (ID) regulations.

Before we get to specifics, there is one more thing you need to know: ID requirements can and do vary from show to show and state to state. The rules covered in this brochure are the basic standards outlined by federal regulations.

Shows/exhibitions and individual states must meet these federal standards, but they can, and often do, exceed them. So to be safe, always check with your event organizers and/or state animal health officials.

BASICS FOR SHOWS AND EXHIBITIONS

Q. What categories of sheep and goats require official ID at shows/exhibitions?

A. All breeding females, i.e. ewes, ewe lambs, does and doelings; All breeding rams and bucks.

Q. What categories of sheep and goats do not require official scrapie ID for shows/exhibitions?

A. Wethers, unless otherwise required by state regulations in the state where the show is taking place or by a specific show's rules.

Q. Does this mean that official scrapie ID must be in place for all sheep and goats, as outlined in the first question, for all shows?

A. No, shows and exhibitions that are not open to out-of-state exhibitors are not required to have official scrapie ID. However, the show or state may have such a requirement, so be sure to check the show rules or with the organizers of the event.

Q. When can breed registration tattoos be used in place of official scrapie ID tags?

A. A registration tattoo can be used when the animal is accompanied by its registration paper or a photocopy or a completed application for registration.

Q. Are electronic microchips allowed in goats for exhibition?

A. If your goat breed registry recognizes electronic microchips as an authorized form of ID and the microchip number is recorded on the registration certificate, then electronic ID is acceptable. You must also have your registration certificate (or a copy of it) or a health certificate which includes the microchip number that matches the one on the registration certificate. Further you must take your own reader unless one is provided by the show.

Q. When should sheep or goats be tagged?

A. Any time prior to leaving the farm or ranch.

Q. What about health certificates?

A. Anytime sheep or goats cross state lines, they must be accompanied by a health certificate (Certificate of Veterinary inspection). Note: Check the show rules; some events require health certificates for all entries.

Q. How do I know if a given show will have entries from other states?

A. Check the shows official rules or ask the show organizers.

Q. Who do I call to find out what my state requires for official scrapie ID at shows/exhibitions?

A. Contact your local veterinarian. Also, your State Veterinarian's Office can inform you of ID requirements and movement restrictions. Phone numbers for the 50 State Veterinarian Offices can be obtained at www.animalagriculture.org/scrapie.

Q. If I am taking my animals to an out-of-state show, can I assume that I must have official scrapie ID and a health certificate?

A. Yes.

Q. Where can I get official identification tags and/or more information?

A. Simply call 1-866-873-2824. That number will put you in touch with animal health officials in your state who are responsible for the scrapie eradication program.

Q. What if my sheep or goat loses its official ID?

A. Replace it with a new one, and record the new number and flock of birth in your records.

Q. If I sell my sheep or goat at the show, what records am I required to keep?

A. Record the ID of the individual animal(s) sold and the buyers name, address and telephone number and retain the records for five years.

Q. Where can I find out more about scrapie and the scrapie eradication program?

A. Contact your local veterinarian or call your State Veterinarian's Office. Or, check out: USDA, APHIS Veterinary Services www.aphis.usda.gov/vs/scrapie; and/or: National institute for Animal Agriculture www.animalagriculture.org/scrapie.

Penn State Offers A Website To Guide Beef Producers

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) — Beef producers can consult a new interactive Website developed by Penn State's College of Agricultural Sciences for help in scheduling routine management activities for their herds, guidance in keeping thorough records, timely business tips, and information about beef-related events.

Progressive beef producers will find the Website — beefcalendar.cas.psu.edu — a vital tool for their businesses.

The calendar is a joint effort of Penn State, Purdue University, and the University of Kentucky, developed from a print-version management calendar that is produced annually by the University of Kentucky. State advisory committees worked under the direction of a state coordinator to develop the calendar components appropriate for each specific location. Penn State beef specialist John Comerford served as coordinator for Pennsylvania.

By asking producers a series of questions about desired calving dates, breeding methods, and weaning ages, the Website utilizes standard gestation periods to recommend a custom schedule for management of the beef herd.

Producers also can use the calendar to record personal dates, such as birthdates, anniversaires, etc.

Another component of the calendar is the inclusion of monthly tips to address seasonal management activities, such as weed control, planting of small grain and forage crops, and animal health measures.

Long term goals for future development of the Website include the addition of performance and quality assurance records. The site also may grow to assist producers in meeting the requirements of proposed Country-of-Origin Labeling legislation.

In the future, the interactive beef calendar also may serve as a reminder to producers to record treatment records and provide a convenient site for future reference and analysis of herd performance.

Redding Testifies Before House Ag Subcommittee

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — At the request of Congressman Tim Holden, the Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture's (PDA) Deputy Secretary for Administration, Russell Redding testified before the U.S. House Subcommittee on General Farm Commodities and Risk Manage*ment in Washington, D.C. on the* importance of specialty crop insurance.

"This is an excellent opportunity for the Department to advocate for change in federal crop insurance programs to reflect the diversity of Pennsylvania agriculture," said Redding. "With more growers producing crops for local and metropolitan markets, specialty crop insurance is rising in importance yet most remain uninsurable."

In the Agriculture Risk Protection Act (ARPA) of 2000, Pennsylvania was listed as one of 15 states considered underserved by crop insurance. Since then, through federal cost share programs and the development of the AGR-Lite program, PDA has made great strides in improving the crop insurance options available to Pennsylvania farmers.

As a result PDA's efforts, Pennsylvania was one of four states asked to testify before Congress.

"Promoting improved farm-level risk management has shown to be good public policy for the Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture, and has added financial strength on thousands of Pennsylvania farms. With repeated disasters within the last several years, crop insurance has been the cornerstone for the survival of Pennsylvania farms," said Redding.

SHIPPENSBURG (Cumberland Co.) — Mike Woods runs from pen to pen. The humidity makes his blond hair drip sweat.

His varied group of livestock from The Myers Family Dairy Farm, Mechanicsburg, included the grand champion market lamb, grand champion dairy beef steer, and a pair of grand champion market hogs.

"This was a very good year and a lot of fun," he said. "The judges were very impressed with my dairy beef steer and said it was ahead of the rest."

Woods' 1,300-pound dairy steer, Pedro, sold for $1,075. His 129-pound market lamb sold to Bill Leib of Leib Southdowns and John Warner of Warner Painting for $500.

He also sold a Dorset market lamb for $325; a 1,275 pound reserve champion light-heavyweight dairy beef steer, Bullet, for $950; a champion light weight market goat, Belle, for $275; a market goat, Pepper, for $220; and a grand champion pair of market hogs for $560.

This is the third year showing market animals at the FFA sale for the 17-year-old Cumberland Valley Senior and his seventh showing dairy steers.

"I grew up on my grandparents' dairy farm with the animals and that has been my job," he said.

His grandparents, Barb and George Myers, own Myers Family Farm, a 60-head, 150 acre dairy farm in Mechaniscburg.

Woods said his future plans include an ag education degree from Penn State University and raising meat goats on the side.

Woods was among 26 FFA members from Big Sring, Cumberland Valley and Shippensburg to show 92 heads of livestock and bring in $38,812. Average prices for youth livestock at the sale were: beef, $956; market lambs, $258; market hogs, $347; and goats $248.

"Goats are the second most consumed red meat next to beef," Woods said.

Even though he raises goats and would like to continue, he said he never tried goat meat.

"I'd like to try it," he said.

Mike Woods, right, sold his 129-pound grand champion market lamb to John Warner of Warner Painting, left, and Bill Leib of Leib Southdowns, center, for $500.

Pa. Cattlemen's, Angus Associations Gather At Cyagra/Em Tran

CHARLENE M. SHUPP
Special Correspondent

ELIZABETHTOWN (Lancaster Co.) — More than 275 beef cattle producers gathered at the Em Tran Facility in Elizabethtown, Lancaster County, to get an insight to the latest genetic tools and technologies at the 2003 Pa. Cattlemen's Association and Pa. Angus Association Field Day.

Alejandro Cantarelli, CEO of Cyagra, Em Tran's parent company, welcomed everyone to Em Tran by saying, "You (the visitors) make this day special. We are excited to have everyone here today and to introduce you to what we are doing today. This company has been in existence in excess of 20 years. (Recently, Cyagra) has been redefined as a biotechnology company, in anticipation of the future."

Visitors were able to tour the Em Tran facility and several cows in the Em Tran Embryo Transfer (ET) program and the newest additions, cloned calves born at the farm.

The keynote speaker, during the noon program, was Don Coover of SEK Genetics. He spoke about his experiences with cloning from a breeder and producer perspective.

Coover, remarked that cloning is a tool that can be useful to gain increased genetic impact from beef cattle. A breeder of club calves, he notes that one challenge is the quick turn around in the club calf industry, noting that "by the time you identify animals of importance, it's too late."

He said cloning will help genetics reach their full impact that otherwise would be lost.

Cyagra has successfully cloned five bulls of Coover's popular club calf sire, "Full Flush" and is waiting for approval by FDA to market their semen. His decision to clone this popular bull came after demand for semen of Full Flush exceeded the production.

Although a large investment is needed to begin the process to clone a calf, cloning provides a great marketing opportunity for a breeder.

Coover said, "If you have a great animal, you can sell the animal and still have the genetics."

Cloning is still in its early stages, which Coover compares to the early days of artificial insemination, and like this genetic counterpart, its impact is yet to be realized.

"This is a powerful technology," said Coover, who is also a veterinarian. "We are on the threshold of a biotechnology revolution. In 30 years, you will not be able to recognize the beef industry. It will be totally different."

The use of cloning in animal agriculture is still in review by FDA. While the final decision on the use of cloning is not decided. Coover remains excited at the potential for its use in the future.

In addition to the keynote address and tour, seminars were held at different locations at Em Tran. Jena Melot of NRCS talked about the stream bank fencing project recently completed at Em Tran and other conservation programs available to beef producers to maintain an environmentally sound operation.

Paul Tauer of Heat Watch, a cattle heat detection program, talked about ways to improve reproductive efficiency with computer technology.

Cyagra staff also expanded Coover's topic with sessions on the use of improved methods to program cows for breeding and Em Tran's embryo flushing and sexing programs. They also had a seminar taking visitors step by step through the genetic preservation and cloning process.

National Angus Conference And Tour Set For September 24-27 In Mandan, N.D.

MANDAN, N.D. — Plans are underway for the 2003 National Angus Conference and Tour, scheduled September 24-27 in Mandan, N.D.

The American Angus Association has planned a program full of top-notch beef industry speakers lined up for the one-day conference program.

The North Dakota Angus Association (NDAA) is putting the finishing touches on the more than two-day tour, which will feature Angus herds from across the state.

The theme for this year's event is "Take Initiative," and the conference speakers will challenge both seedstock and commercial producers to "take initiative" when selecting genetics, managing resources and exploring marketing options.

"We are excited to sponsor the National Angus Conference and Tour," says Wayne Cole, Senior Manager-Cattle Marketing, Boehringer Ingelheim Vetmedica. "Given the rapid changes in technologies, products and marketing strategies in the beef industry, this is an important event for any beef producer wishing to learn about increasing their profitability."

Speakers on the program include Daryl Strohbehn, Iowa State University; Barry Dunn, South Dakota State University; Ron Lemanager, Purdue University; Kevin Yon, Ridge Spring, S.C.; Gene Harris, Killdeer, N.D.; and Vance Uden, Franklin, Neb. Presentations will also be given on herd health and beef quality assurance.

Following the conference, members of the NDAA will showcase some the best Angus genetics their state has to offer. Attendees will have the opportunity to see some of the best herds in the state as well as see diverse environments and scenic areas.

Members who will host tour stops include Tokach Angus Ranch, Ellingson Angus Ranch, Schaff's Angus Valley, Frey Angus Ranch, McCumber Angus Ranch, Vollmer Angus Ranch, Brooks Chalky Butte Ranch and Fairview Angus Ranch. Other breeders will also be featured at centralized stops.

Registration materials for the event will be available soon. Request them by contacting Linda Campbell at (816) 383-5100 or lcampbell@angus.or

Wet Weather May Rot Soybean Yields

COLUMBUS, Ohio — Wet soil conditions have been the root of a lot of problems this planting season and soybean growers continue to struggle with added stress from hot weather.

Ohio soybean fields are beginning to dry, but 18 percent remain saturated, and resulting root-rot diseases are increasing estimated yield losses.

"In June, we had fairly wet soil conditions throughout most of the month," said Jim Beuerlein, an Ohio State University agronomist. "There was plenty of opportunity for soybean plants to get infected with all the root rot diseases, and that probably happened in most fields.

"Now that we're in July, things have dried out and temperatures are up and beans are growing," he said. "And since they have been infected, we expect to see these diseases, with warmer soil temperatures, starting to develop and destroy root systems."

To this point, growers have planted 97 percent of Ohio's soybean crop, according to the Ohio Agricultural Statistics Service. This is compared to 100 percent last year.

Late planting, combined with root rot diseases, will produce smaller plants with fewer nodes. Plants that usually average 3 feet of growth may only be 1.5 feet to 2.5 feet tall, said Beurelein, who also is a professor in horticulture and crop science. Growers can expect lower yields from smaller plants and fewer pods.

Depending on the rest of the season, it is estimated that yields will be below 40 bushels per acre, compared to the normal 43 bushels to 44 bushels per acre. Any additional stress on the plants, such as recent high temperatures, will increase disease and yield losses.

New Pest Bugs Soybean Growers

WOOSTER, Ohio — Along with the stresses of the weather, soybean growers might be faced with yet another problem: soybean aphids. The pest was recently identified in a Wooster field and entomologists are encouraging growers to scout their fields.

Soybean aphids are relatively new to the United States and to Ohio State University researchers. The pests were first identified in 2000 and were a major problem in northern Ohio and surrounding states in 2001, said Ron Hammond, an entomologist with the Ohio Agricultural Research and Development Center. Last year researchers were prepared to battle the bug, but it was almost non-existent.

"Two years ago, we didn't really realize we had the pest until too late," Hammond said. "And last year, it didn't really show up-it was low throughout the Midwest. We don't really know what it will do this year, but we hope it's like last year."

Based on the soybean aphid damage seen in 2001, Minnesota was expecting to spray over two million acres last year. Ohio was prepared to spray one-half million acres, and that was based on damage seen only in the northern part of Ohio, Hammond said. If the aphids get into bigger soybean regions, it could be a major problem.

A population of soybean aphids can easily reduce yields by five to 10 bushels per acre, Hammond said. Injury from soybean aphids include pod abortion, and later in the season, small seed development.

If the soybean aphid becomes a problem, farmers would be facing $10 to $15 per acre of additional costs for spray, Hammond said. However, because it only takes three to four bushels to cover spray cost, the cost of spray is well justified compared to the losses caused by soybean aphids.

"I hope it's a problem we don't have to get into," Hammond said. "Growers have enough to handle with the weather and prices. They don't need to have another problem."

The pests, which cover the plant and suck the juices out of it, can get into the thousands per plant, Hammond said. Growers want to keep numbers minimal, but do not want to spray too soon or it will allow for the aphids to return by the end of the season. It is recommended to wait to spray until early- to mid-July when the plants are flowering and setting pods, and the majority of plants are covered with 250 or more aphids.

Soybean aphids, which are often mistaken for small potato leafhopper nymphs, overwinter on buck-thorn. This host is usually found along hedges, fence lines, and wooded areas. But the Wooster field where the aphids were identified is not close to hedges, fence lines or woods, Hammond said.

The aphid also is thought to be a cool-season pest because of its invasion of northern United States, but researchers are not yet sure. If the aphids are a problem this year, more traits will be figured out.

show has lots of quality," said Judge Dana Brown, Strasburg.

Grand champion honors in both the open and 4-H competitions went to a 2-year-old named Cotton owned by Melissa Huff, 9.

Brown said he selected Cotton because she had the best udder. The Huff name is not new to the winning circle. Melissa's parents Patty and Brian Huff, Nottingham, are well known Jersey breeders. Patty has been showing and winning since she was a little girl and has passed on her love for it to her daughter. Melissa owns eight of the family's 75 head from Shywood Farm, Nottingham.

The reserve champion overall went to the junior champion, dubbed "most stylish" by Brown. The reserve, an intermediate calf, is owned by Meredith Bailey, Chester County dairy princess, who helps with the family's 200-head herd.

The Sollenbergers are another family carrying on the dairy tradition. Three generations gathered to help with a string of 22 from their herd of 70 from French Creek Farm.

Grandfather Clyde Scheib started showing in 1961. He said, "Now I come to visit and they (grandchildren and daughter) do all the work."

His daughter Holly spread her passion for dairying to her children. Daughter Julie is a former Pennsylvania Fair Queen and National Guernsey Queen. Siblings, Kevin, 17; Colin, 14; and Kyle, 9, raise and show animals from Guernsey, Jersey, Holstein, and Lineback breeds. In the Guernsey open show, they exhibited the grand and reserve champions. Some of the breed competitions had not been conducted by presstime.

For $3, fairgoers could have photos taken with Fireball, a Red and White Holstein calf, owned by Robert Hershey, 13. Chester County 4-H'ers took turns bringing their animals to the photo spot during Kimberton Community Fair, July 21-26. "It's a fundraiser for the club," Hershey said. He is the son of Duane and Marilyn Hershey, Cochranville. The photo opportunity delighted youngsters who seldom have the opportunity to get up close to farm animals.

New Technology For Detecting Turkey Respiratory Virus Now Available

ATHENS, Ga. — Agricultural Research Service scientists have identified an important gene sequence that can help identify and differentiate avian metapneumovirus. This organism is responsible for turkey rhinotracheitis, an upper respiratory illness that causes sneezing, swollen sinuses, nasal discharge and coughing in turkeys.

Microbiologists Bruce Seal and Rene Alvarez of the Southeast Poultry Research Laboratory in Athens, Ga., deciphered a segment of the virus' genetic sequence. The sequence, previously unrecorded in the genetic databases, could be used to develop a diagnostic detection kit.

Avian metapneumovirus can be found in turkey and chicken flocks throughout the world, but is frequently reported in turkeys in Minnesota and Europe.

The virus is also associated with swollen head syndrome and infectious respiratory disease in chickens outside of the United States.

Although not very virulent by itself, avian metapneumovirus — in combination with other pathogens or Newcastle disease vaccines — can cause severe respiratory disease and weight loss in poultry. Early detection of the metapneumovirus may allow better timing of Newcastle disease virus vaccination to prevent this complication.

The metapneumovirus is primarily transmitted by surface contact, which allows producers to reduce its effects by using biocontainment methods such as disinfection and controlled access to poultry houses.

Avian metapneumonvirus causes a high rate of illness in turkeys that are 6-12 weeks of age. Early detection would allow producers to take action and reduce potential losses in this segment of the flock.

A patent application was filed in November 2002 for the unique gene sequence, and the technology is now available for licensing. The sequence may also be useful for developing methods to detect different avian metapneumovirus subtypes.

USDA Announces Program To Protect Grassland

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — The USDA Farm Service Agency and Natural Resources Conservation Service announce the availability of $660,000 in funding to protect grasslands within Pennsylvania through the new Grassland Reserve Program, legislated as part of the 2003 Farm Bill.

Grassland can be protected through 30-year or permanent easements which are similar to the Farmland Preservation Program, or through rental agreements that are set up much like the Conservationve Program. Easements are based on an appraisal while rental payments vary by county and range from $7 per acre to $16.50 an acre. Rental contracts can be 10, 15, 20, or 30 years in length. Haying will likely be restricted during nesting periods to protect critical wildlife habitat.

There is a minimum requirement of 40 contiguous acres and applications will be prioritized based on ranking criteria that will be placed on the NRCS Website at www.pa.nrcs.usda.gov. While applications will be accepted at any time, there is an Aug. 1, cut-off for ranking applications for FY03 funding. This will allow time for contract obligations to be completed prior to the end of the fiscal year on Sept. 30.

For information contact a USDA Service Center which can be found in the telephone book under USDA, Natural Conservation Service or Farm Service Agency.

Farm Bureau And Farmers Union Urge Congress To Restore Funding For COOL

WASHINGTON, D.C. — National Farmers Union (NFU) and the American Farm Bureau Federation (AFBF) co-signed a letter of support for mandatory country-of-origin labeling (COOL) for food this week in light of recent attempts in the House of Representatives to weaken the new law.

The two general farm organizations sent a joint letter to House members July 10 opposing language in the fiscal year 2004 agriculture appropriations bill that would freeze funding for the implementation of origin labeling for meats. The House is expected to consider the legislation as early as July 14.

"The secretary of agriculture has the ultimate responsibility to ensure mandatory country-of-origin labeling is successful," said NFU President Dave Frederickson. "Instead of back-tracking to weaken this important legislation before the rules are even written, Congress should work closely with USDA to make sure the final guidelines match the original congressional intent and are friendly to producers and consumers as well as processors."

NFU and AFBF, which together represent the majority of the nation's agriculture producers, support an amendment to restore funding for country-of-origin labeling, which Reps. Dennis Rehberg, R-Mont., and Darlene Hooley, D-Ore., introduced this week.

Buffalo Industry Preparing New Meat Labeling Program

DENVER, Colo. — Consumers may soon find a new label appearing on meat packages that verifies that the products came from animals that were American raised, and produced without added growth hormones, subtherapeutic antibiotics, or animal-based feed.

They won't find the label on beef, pork, poultry, or lamb. This new label will appear only on buffalo meat products.

The National Bison Association recently began the final stages of testing on a new animal-tracking program that will allow products in the retail case or restaurants to carry a new "Certified American Buffalo" logo that will be process verified by the U.S. Department of Agriculture.

Meanwhile, segments of the major meat industries prevailed on Congress this week to eliminate funding for a program that would have required all beef, pork, lamb, and seafood products to be marked with the country-of-origin by Sept. 2004.

"The major segments of the beef and pork industry are fighting legislation that would require them to inform consumers about the country-of-origin of their products," noted Dave Carter, National Bison Association executive director. "But buffalo ranchers are willing to stand behind their products. Our new labeling initiative will assure customers that we can track buffalo meat back to American ranches that do not use growth hormones, subtherapeutic antibiotics, or feed with animal byproducts."

The Bison Association's new program will use a special animal tracking system to verify that all meat carrying an authorized "Certified American Buffalo" label meets specific production practices and protocols.

The association is working with the U.S. Department of Agriculture to develop the procedures for the "USDA Process Verified" program.

Once approved by the USDA, the program will allow participating ranchers and marketers to use the "Certified American Buffalo" label that will verify that the products were produced from American raised animals that were not fed antibiotics or animal byproducts, and were not administered growth hormones.

Maryland Dairy Pasture Walk Set

CARROLL COUNTY, Md. — A dairy pasture walk is scheduled for Thursday, July 31 from 10 a.m. until noon. Glenn Shirley will be hosting the event.

Shirley's 80-cow herd is grazed on 80 acres of permanent pasture and is moving toward a seasonal calving program.

The purpose of the pasture walk is to allow livestock producers a chance to learn more about the use of rotational grazing as a way to increase agricultural profitability and improve a farm family's way of life.

The farm is located at 149 Barnhart Road. From Westminster, go north on Rt. 97 to Union Mills. Turn right onto Old Hanover Rd. Go about 3½ miles to Barnhart Road. Turn right and go about ½ mile to farm on right. Watch for pasture walk signs.

NCGA Sees No Setback For Ethanol In Ruling

WASHINGTON, D.C. — The National Corn Growers Association (NCGA) said last week the ruling by the U.S. Ninth Circuit Court of Appeals in San Francisco substantiating U.S. Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) actions supporting ethanol is not a setback for the renewable fuel. The same court ruling also requires EPA to reconsider a portion of California's request for a waiver from federal fuel additive requirements.

"While some may see this decision as a loss for ethanol, in reality, the EPA's original decision was reaffirmed," said NCGA vice president of Public Policy Jon Doggett. "The court said EPA should have also looked at the impact on national ambient air quality standards. . . We are on the verge of obtaining a national renewable fuels standard and we don't view this as a setback."

According to court documents, "The EPA abused its discretion by refusing to evaluate the effect that an oxygen waiver would have on California's efforts to comply. We accordingly remand this case to the EPA with instructions to give full consideration to the effect of a waiver on both the ozone and pollutant standards."

Sustainable Ag Grants Available For Northeast Farmers

MONTROSE (Susquehanna Co.) — Farmers in the Northeast who are interested in conducting innovative production and marketing projects are encouraged to apply to the Sustainable Agriculture Research and Education (SARE) program for grant funds for projects starting in the spring.

Applications can address a broad range of agricultural issues such as pest management, soil and water conservation, aquaculture, marketing, grazing, bee health, no-till, pasture management, agroforestry, and other sustainable farming techniques.

Northeast SARE defines sustainable agriculture as agriculture that is profitable, environmentally sound, and good for the community. In 2003, the average grant was about $5,200; grants are capped at $10,000.

Any full or part-time farmer in the Northeast SARE region can apply. The region is made up of Connecticut, Delaware, Massachusetts, Maryland, Maine, New Hampshire, New Jersey, New York, Pennsylvania, Rhode Island, Vermont, West Virginia, and Washington, D.C.

Applications and more information about the requirements of the Farmer/Grower Grant program are available on the Northeast SARE web site at www.uvm.edu. You can also call (802) 656-0471 to request a printed application. The proposal deadline is December 8, 2003.

Lancaster County Weekly Cattle

New Holland, Pa.
Report Supplied By USDA
Friday, July 25, 2003

	CATTLE	CALVES
THIS WEEK	2171	2014
LAST WEEK	2228	2230
LAST YEAR	2138	2643

Compared to last week's closing prices, slaughter steers opened up the week trading with a weaker undertone only to trade 1.00-2.00 higher late in the week. However, there were a lot of national factors that were supportive of the local market at the end of the week that the Tuesday run was not able to lean on. For instance, the Western feeders moved the bulk of their live steers a full 3.00 higher this week from 76.00-78.00. The Board was also extremely supportive by weeks end as the current July contract gained 3.00 over Wednesday and Thursday due to two consecutive limit-up rallies; to close at 78.30. The chairs surrounding the ring at the New Holland auction on Thursday should have had seatbelts as trading was very active on a very nice run of high Choice and Prime cattle. It was a few months ago when fat cattle prices in Lancaster County set all time records as prices were reported as high as 90.00, and just when you think the summer slump is finally going to set in, prices spike sharply higher again. At the Thursday run packages of high Choice and Prime steers were bringing from 83.00-85.00; with fancy singles up to 88.00. Needless-to-say, farmer feeders are once again looking at very healthy profits. Holstein steers sold with a weaker tone early in the week, with late week prices 1.00 higher. Slaughter heifers were hard to come by this week, with a trend never established. Slaughter cows sold as much as 3.00 lower through mid-week, with cow prices on Thursday 2.00-3.00 higher. Slaughter bulls followed the same path, trending weaker until Thuraday, when prices were 2.00 higher. The reported supply this week in Lancaster County included 815 head of slaughter steers, 74 head of slaughter heifers, 1032 head of slaughter cows, 143 head of slaughter bulls, and 107 head of feeder cattle.

Slaughter Steers: High Choice and Prime 2-4 1105-1490 lbs 82.00-85.60, early in the week 80.00-83.50, outstanding singles late in the week 86.00-88.00. Calf Summary: Compared to last week's closing prices, slaughter calves sold steady to weak. Holstein bull calves suitable for special-fed veal barns sold lower for the week; with the majority of the decline noted on the middle weight (95-115 lbs) bull calves as they dropped as much as 50.00. Graded Number 3 bull calf prices have leveled off for the most part since their addition earlier in the month, as the bulk of the Number 3's are bringing kill prices. Holstein heifer calves sold steady to firm early in the week, and held their momentum through late week as prices reached 530.00. Northeast veal profits remain very good, with local feeders reporting dressed prices as high as 300.00. The PA Department of Agriculture graded 1267 head of heifer and bull calves at the two graded sales in Lancaster County this week, compared to 1391 last week.

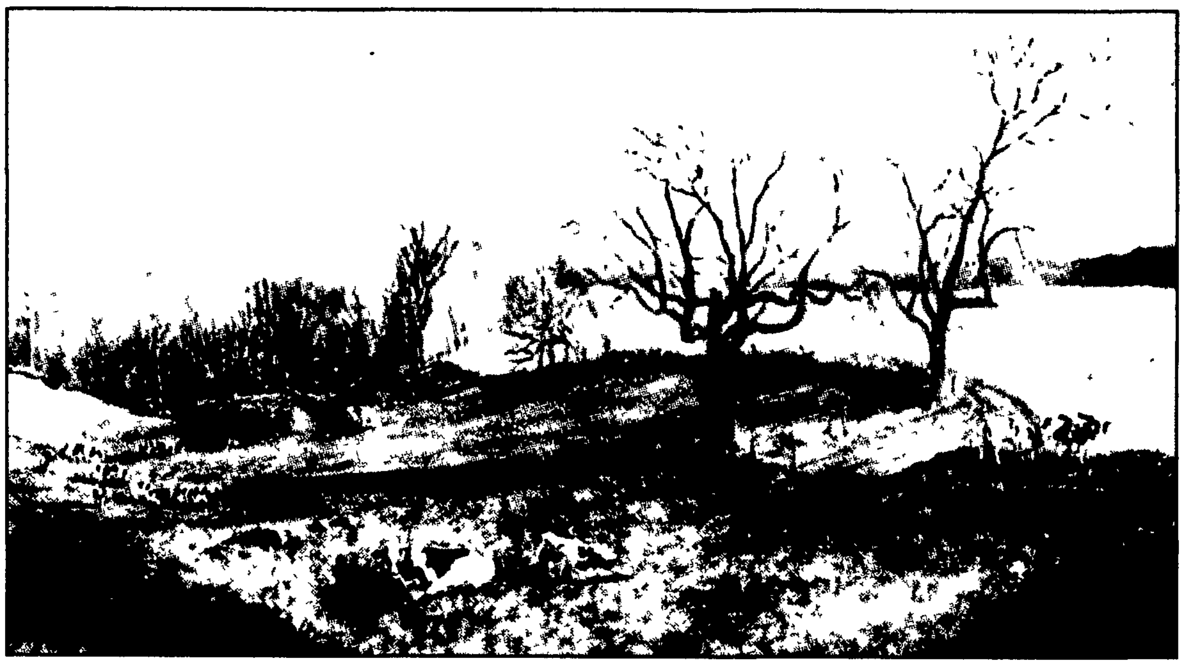
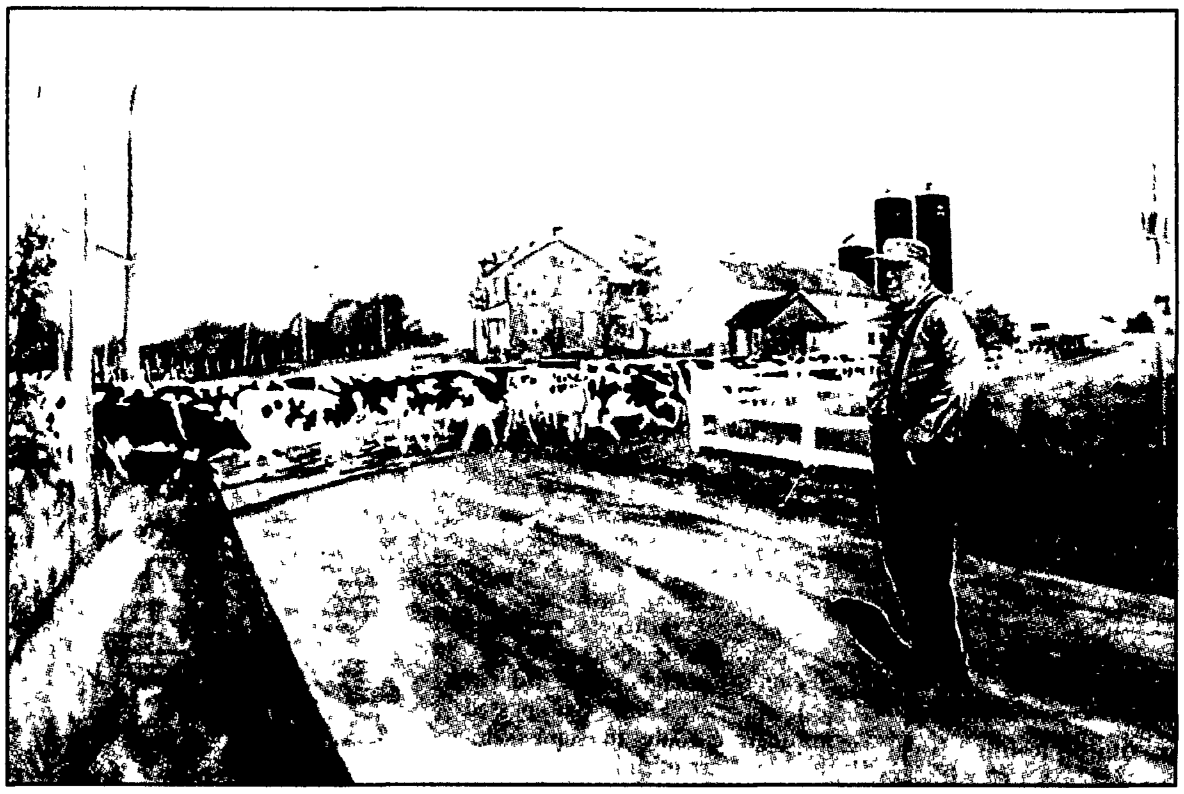
FARM TIRES
THE LEADER IN THE FIELD

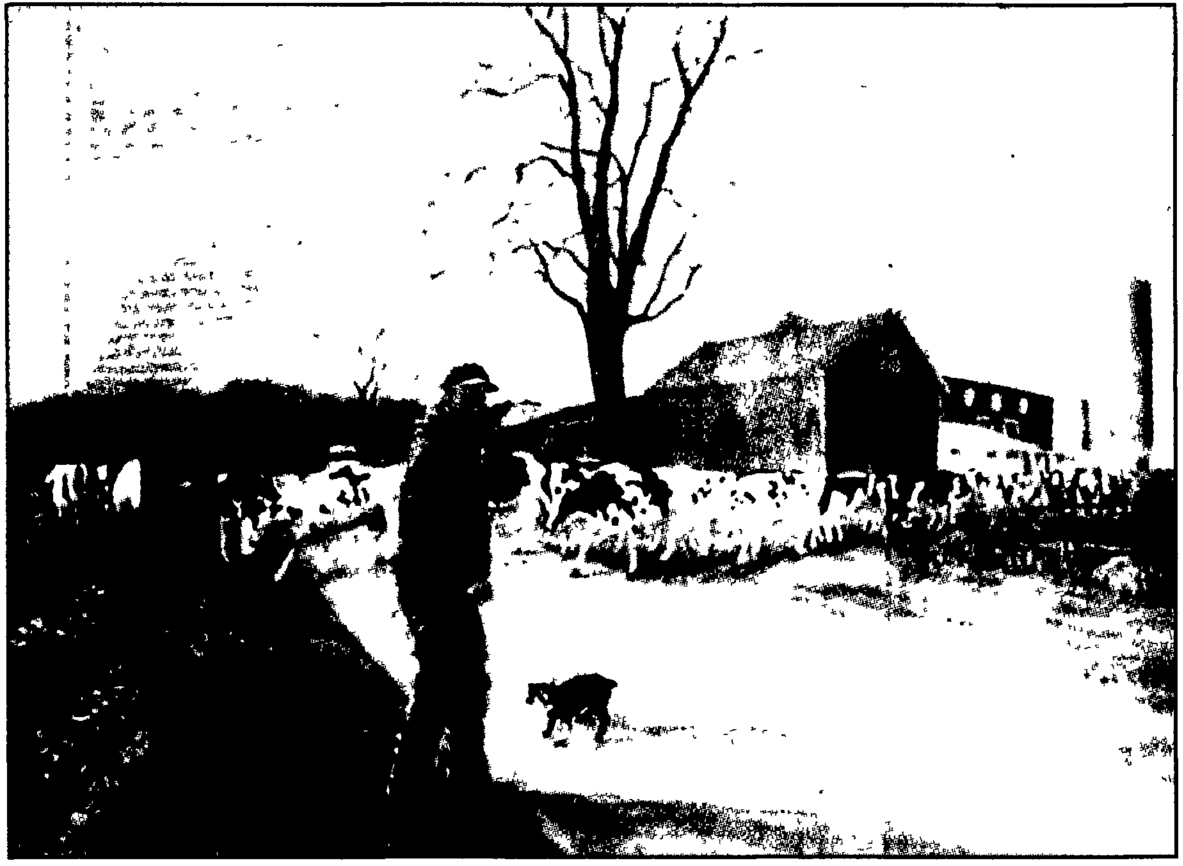
FIRESTONE GCR "MUMMAU" TIRE SERVICE CENTER



"Waiting for Spring" is captured in oils at the Miller and Davis Farm, Richmond Township.

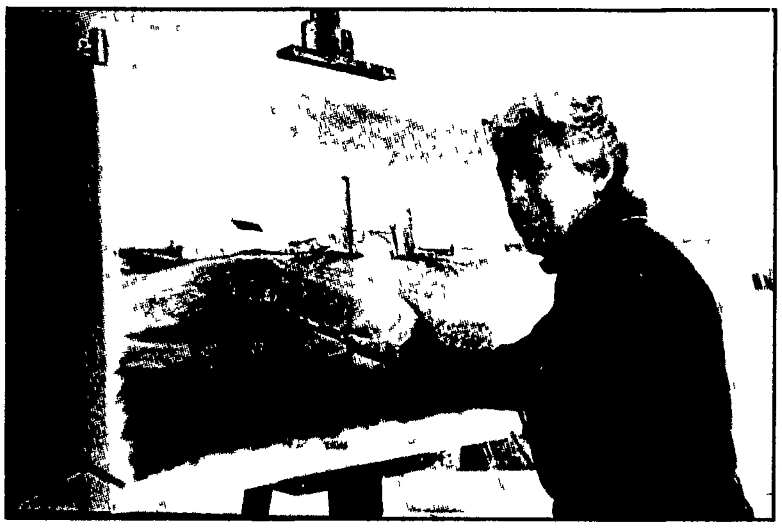


"Kermit Schlegel Farm" captures this almost obsolete scene of cows crossing the road.



"Hey, Dave," is the title of one Joyce Floreen's paintings of neighboring dairy farmer Dave Bitler with his herd crossing the road at Vista Grande Farm, Fleetwood.

HOMESTEAD NOTES



Joyce Floreen works on a painting of the farm owned by Luther and Theresa David.

Artist Paints 'Cowgnoscenti' Scenes

LOU ANN GOOD
Food And Family
Features Editor

FLEETWOOD (Berks Co.) — Joyce Floreen isn't trying to be a word snob when she says that she paints landscapes for the "cowgnoscenti."

"It's a pun," the artist is quick to point out. "The form of the word gnoscenti is a common Italian word used by those who think they are cultured," she explained. "Cowgnoscenti means a person who is in the know about cows."

People who are in the know about cows find her paintings capture fascinating views of everyday living in the life of cows.

Floreen's Fleetwood home is surrounded by cows owned by numerous dairy farmers.

Nothing brings Floreen more pleasure than sketching the antics of the pastoral bovines.

"Those cows won't pose for me," she complained good naturedly. But Floreen is patient. She views them with a practiced eye and patience.

Floreen believes her artwork captures farm life in an interesting way and shows how farming methods are changing. In particular, her scenes of cows crossing the road are fast becoming obsolete to the average motorist.

"I got started painting late in life," Floreen said after a career in advertising. In the beginning she was self taught and often took photos and painted a composite of several. Since then she has studied painting with Jack Coggins at the Wyomissing Institute of Fine Art and with various art professors.

Her late start has not hindered her artistic success. Floreen's work has been chosen for exhibit at numerous juried shows and invitational shows.

In 1990, Floreen began painting full time after restoring a mural on a barn owned by Brendle and Raydell Stufflet on Balthaser Road.

Floreen conducted her first art show in 1994. Recently Reading Area Community College (RACC) was the site for a reception for "Landscapes for the Cowgnoscenti." RACC sponsors Meet the Artist invitational series to enhance the cultural atmosphere of the college for students and for regional visual artists to exhibit.

Sketching neighbors' herds enables Floreen to strike up conversations with farmers. She said, "It's a great pleasure to get to know people who devote themselves to this arduous life."

Floreen also believes her paintings captures the beauty of rural areas that people want to preserve.

Floreen's Studio, 79 Keller Rd., Fleetwood, is open weekends in July and by appointment. Call (610) 987-6511.

On Being a Farm Wife

(and other hazards)

Joyce Bupp

It was hard not to be amused.

Because I'd watched a similar scene play out so many times before here at home. Same plot. Same actions. Same ending. Different player.

The farmer friend playing out this familiar scene was responding to a request for a series of accumulated receipts. Following a diligent retrieval process involving pockets, wallet, and various sections of a briefcase, he turned over a sizeable accumulation of envelopes, bills, and small slips representing business-related charges, all in a few moments time, right before our eyes.

I was impressed. Not a single piece of dried-up haylage had fallen out of the amassed bits and pieces of farmer-commerce tracking. The slips of paper all looked clean.

The process brought to mind the periodic occasions when a tousled stack of crumpled, scruffy, dusty, and greasy-fingerprinted bits of paper suddenly turn up on the kitchen counter or the office desk. Many of them are yellow, a few perhaps pink, maybe even a pale green one once in awhile, denoting buys, sells, deliveries, and pickups.

These tracking pieces of farm transactions all have their own story, should one want to pause and ponder them. One small slip may carry a series of numbers denoting codes of bulls, tracing pieces of breeding material to hopefully improve the genetics of our dairy herd. Others tell the variety of supplies used on a daily basis, from the plastic gloves we wear for milking, to deliveries of bags of calf feed, to tankloads of liquid plant food for the field crops.

The bulk of the slips that accumulate represent a paper trail of machinery maintenance. Collections of these paper pieces gather in corners of the shop desk, the pickup, the barn office. Their wrinkled, grease-stained faces tell of replacement bearings for tractors or pins for hay equipment, cutting colters for planters, harvest machine blades, and tillage tool knives.

And tires. Lots of tires and tire "fixes."

Just out of curioriosity — and because no fistfuls of paper trail material had actually landed in the house for awhile — I ran an inventory a bit later while piloting the pickup as part of a harvest truck shuttle mission. The front seat was amazingly clean and had but a single parts paper-trail sheet on the console. Then I remembered that the pickup had been parked for several days of wait time for some relatively minor tune-up work and not on active part gathering trips.

Diving further into the back section gave a truer picture. Several paper trail additions in various stages of crinkly crumpledness were stashed amidst a hat or two, a glo-orange hunting sweatshirt, thermal coveralls (apparently in case of a sudden July cold snap), the brush part of a pushbroom, a tennis ball, a softball, and a flashlight. Which may or may not light; I didn't stop to check.

All these paper trail pieces were dutifully collected, except for the one that tore to shreds when I tried to yank it from being stuck underneath something heavy buried under the thermal coveralls. No matter. Its billing contents will surely be included on some larger, all-encompassing monthly accounts statement from somewhere.

Eventually, the possibly-useful slips were filed away and the probably-never-necessary ones were chucked. Only a small residual on the kitchen counter told of the paper-trail that had passed through enroute to some semblance of organization.

There must be some use for a half-dozen dehydrated dead flies.

Teens Offer Perspective On Visit To Israeli Farms

SANDRA LEPLEY
Somerset Co. Correspondent

SPRINGS (Somerset Co.) — Two teenagers from Springs in Somerset County recently returned from a six-month mission trip to Israel, where they were able to visit a Kaibbutz (pronounced Kabutz) or cooperative farmstead, as well as the country of Turkey and the city of Jerusalem.

Crystal Dornburg and Angela Maust, both 19, were in Israel during the Iraqi Freedom War and described their time spent there as a learning experience and a calling from God on their lives.

"I'd do it again in a heartbeat," said Dornburg. "I told myself before all this I was never, ever going to be a missionary. I liked it in the United States and that is where I was going to stay but I learned so much."

The teenagers mostly stayed in Tel-Aviv and helped teach a kindergarten class where Messianic Jews, or Jews believing in Christ, sent their children to school.

During their stay, they visited a Kaibbutz in the town of Yotvata. A Kaibbutz is similar to a cooperative farm only much, much bigger and more like a small town.

"They have everything in a Kaibbutz," said Angela. "There is a daycare, movie theaters, a gym, and stores. It's more like a communal living arrangement and there are foreign volunteers who go there."

Maust explained that there are three or four main dairy Kaibbutz farms, which are the main producing dairies for the whole country. They also have Kaibbutz farms that produce peaches, vegetables, and fruits.

"The whole country is so interesting. Our quarters in Tel-Aviv were just outside the Sea of Galilee and we could see the water as we looked out our window," said Maust.

Both Dornburg and Maust described Israel as a multicultural country with Jewish Russians, Argentineans, Americans and others from different countries. They both laughed about how one could walk down the streets of Tel-Aviv and pass a woman covered completely in cloth and another woman would be wearing a belly shirt and shorts.

"Judaism is a lot like Christianity in the United States," explained Maust. "Some are very devout, like Orthodox Jews, and others are Jewish by heritage but may not practice the religion at all."

During their stay, the teens spent two weeks in Turkey and also visited Jerusalem, which means they rode from the north of Israel to the south through the West Bank, which is considered a dangerous territory. They said that they each kept praying (for protection) during that bus ride. They were able to see the Wailing Wall, where they could look over and see the Dome of the Rock. They also visited the Mount of Olives and other places.

"I really felt safe in Israel, more so than in Turkey," said Maust, who now helps as a cook with mission work in Ohio. "I live in Columbus and hear gun shots in the middle of the night. Israel was not like that. It was peaceful for the most part."

Despite the fact both girls felt safe in Tel-Aviv, there were times of trepidation as the whole of Europe faced an unknown war between Afghanistan and America.

At one point, the girls went to a training course on how to properly wear a gas mask. They often heard heated debates about the war in town but they felt as if most Israelis had a big amount of trust in America.

Both girls chose Israel as their first selection because they felt that was where God was leading them. But, almost a year of preparation went on before the actual plane ride over the ocean on Dec.3 of last year for the six-month journey into the unknown.

Last summer, they each raised $7,000 through various fund-raisers, donations, church dinners, and even selling their vehicles. They both belong to Maple Glen Mennonite Church. Last fall, they each took a three-month training course in Columbus, Ohio.

"When a teenager sells their car, you know they are serious," said Pam Dornburg, Crystal's mother. "A car is everything to a teenager, so we knew they were planning to go through with the decision. We also realized our country could be going into a war."

Pam Dornburg explained that her daughter Crystal and seven other girls participated in 4-H International Foods contests when they were younger. Pam hosted them out of her house. Ironically, one of the other girls who participated in the class is now a missionary in Africa.

"We loved to study about foreign lands and prepare foods from different places," laughed Pam. "I just never knew where that would lead someday. I never thought my daughter would go to Israel during a war but prayers got us through it and now she is back home safe and sound and we are thankful."

Crystal Dornburg and Angela Maust, both 19 and from Springs in Somerset County, recently returned from a missions trip to Israel, where they mostly stayed in Tel-Aviv. While there, the two teens were able to visit a Kaibbutz, or farmstead.

Dad Is Important

NAZARETH (Northampton Co.) — Exciting new research is showing that a father's interactions with his young children is at least as important as the bonding that a child has with his/her mother.

Researchers in Munich, Germany, found that children whose fathers played with them in a supportive, sensitive, and challenging way at the age of two tended to have better relationships with others during their adolescent years.

Dads like to play with their children, and what is learned during quality play cannot be underestimated. Children learn to take necessary risks, rise to new challenges, and explore cause and effect when they engage in recreation with Dad.

Moms tend to teach reasoning, creativity, and organization skills.

Moms and Dads alike have the same goal — to help their child make sense of and manage himself in the wider world. So, tumbling on the floor together is important after all!

Grandparenting In The New Millennium

Grandparenting today is far different than a generation ago. Just as the nuclear family is no longer the norm, so it is with grandparenting. Some seniors are jusy trying to be grandparents; others are raising their son's or daughter's children; and still others are struggling to learn how to be grandparents in a suddenly blended family.

Many well-intentioned grandparents end up causing problems by undermining Mom and Dad's authority with the grandchildren, spoiling them, and not adhering to the family rules. This type of behavior can cause stress and tension among all the generations. Remember these suggestions if you are trying to be a grandparent in this new millennium:

- No favorites allowed — don't show favoritism for one child over another. Every child has special aptitudes; appreciate the uniqueness of each and every grandchild.
- Don't undermine parental authority — Children are able to cope with different rules or expectations at home versus at grandma's place, but do not tamper with parental rules about safety issues (like car seat use), health issues (like food restrictions), or daily routines (like bedtimes).
- Don't try to compete with their parent(s) for the children's attention. Your role in your grandchild's life is supportive but still very important — children need love from many sources — it's not supposed to be a competition.
- Don't speak ill of either parent. Even if Mom or Dad has abandoned the family, don't badmouth the absent parent. Try to honestly explain the situation, and leave a hope for the parent's return.
- Be very non-threatening if you choose to share any parenting tips with your child, and remember that they may choose to totally ignore your advice. Make the suggestion only once and if it is ignored, than let it be. The parent(s) have the authority to set rules for their own children. You can offer praise, approval, and encouragement for their efforts. You are not the star of this relationship; you are part of the supporting cast.

According to the latest statistics, 33 percent of persons 65 or older are actually step-grandparents, and the numbers are growing rapidly. The effort to establish a special relationship with grandchildren in a blended family is especially awkward if there are other grandparents in the picture. The best way to cultivate this new relationship is simply to spend time with the step-grandchildren.

Don't treat these step-grandchildren any different than the other grandchildren. If you attend recitals and sports events for grandchildren, then do so also for the step-grandchildren. Get to know their friends and their interests. Remember their special events.

Recognize that the blended family will be undergoing their own stresses of trying to become a unified family, and that you may be kept at an emotional distance for quite a while. Try to stay focused on the needs of the grandchildren, rather than your desires or expectations for the relationship, and above all, don't pry into the past.

Step-grandparents who are sensitive to the complexities of the situation and respect the grandchildren's needs and wishes have a good chance of eventually developing a lifelong bond with the step-grandchildren.

Grandparenting today may require greater patience and flexibility than in yesteryears, but the importance of grandparents is the same, if not greater. As the structure of families continues to change, and the pressures on parents and children in today's society keep growing, the role of grandparents becomes crucial. As a grandparent, you can offer love, support, and stability to both your children and your grandchildren.

Celebrate National Ice Cream Month

Centre County Dairy Princess, Ashley Bird, asks, "What do Charles I of England, Marco Polo, and Nero Caesar all have in common?"

She answers, "Ice Cream or the creation of it. All of these gentlemen laid claim to the discovery or invention of ice cream or so the myths say."

In 1984, President Ronald Reagan designated July as National Ice Cream Month and the third Sunday of the month as National Ice Cream Day. In his proclamation, President Reagan called for all people of the U.S. to observe these events with ceremonies and activities. This year National Ice Cream Day was July 20.

Ashley writes:

Pennsylvania ranks third in ice cream production in the U.S. With 56 million gallons produced, the sales of ice cream in the U.S. reached over 20 billion dollars last year, thus making the U.S. second in the world in ice cream consumption. Alaska ranks first in consumption of ice cream in the U.S.

As the 2003-2004 Centre County Dairy Princess, ice cream has always been something that I have enjoyed. As part of my duties, I enjoy informing the public about the need for dairy products in your life, and that includes ice cream.

The top five flavors consumed are vanilla, chocolate, Neapolitan, butter pecan, and chocolate chip. However my favorite can only be purchased in my county, Centre County. You are probably wondering what the flavor is and why only Centre County. My favorite is Peachy Paterno, named after the great Penn State football coach, Joe Paterno, and can only be found at the Penn State University Creamery.

Penn State's Creamery is a much-beloved landmark for Penn Staters young and old. You can find long lines waiting patiently during home football weekends, no matter what weather conditions are, school busloads of children and nostalgic alumni along with the current student population all waiting to enjoy their favorite flavors.

When it comes to colleges and ice cream, Penn State really is number one. It is the biggest by far when it comes to university-based creameries. It produces approximately 225,000 gallons of ice cream a year from the 3.5 million pounds of milk that pass through the Creamery's stainless steel holding tanks.

Penn State is also famous for its Ice Cream Short Course which marked its 111th year at the University in January. According to Bob Roberts, associate professor of Food Science and short course director, Penn State's program is the oldest, largest, most comprehensive ice cream technology outreach in the U.S. and the world.

When beginning in 1892 at the then Pennsylvania State College, the School of Agriculture offered a class in dairy manufacturing during the winter. Normally conducted in January when farm work was least pressing, the boys could be spared, the course was free with only a $5 charge for incidental expenses and laboratory fees.

This course has become so popular that it has attracted more than 4,000 participants from every state in the nation and every continent except Antarctica. You find representatives from all well-known companies like Ben and Jerry of Ben and Jerry's fame. Even though it is usually attended by company representatives, it is open to anyone.

So as the month goes on and you enjoy your favorite ice cream flavor, please remember to thank your local dairy farmers for providing you with safe, wholesome milk used to make your favorite ice cream.

If you are looking for a nice Sunday drive, feel free to visit my county, Centre County, and stop at the world renown Penn State Creamery and get some ice cream in your favorite flavor.

As you remember the old saying, "I scream, you scream, we all scream for ice cream," may I suggest trying the following ice cream recipe. It is easy to make and fun to eat on those really hot days of July during National Ice Cream Month. This is a tasty dessert for after dinner anytime of the year. Especially in the summer.

A Super Berry Ice Cream Cone is a perfect summer treat. Fresh berries, strawberry ice cream, and blueberry frozen yogurt are nestled in a large waffle cone. Be sure to use a spoon!

Featured Recipe

Originally created almost as an afterthought, ice cream cones now share the spotlight with the ice cream that goes in them.

The first ice cream cone was produced in New York in 1896 by Italo Marchiony, an Italian immigrant. He was granted a patent on the cone in late 1903, but it seems that Marchiony never achieved any measure of success with his invention. Historically, the credit for inventing the cone often goes to a waffle vendor at the 1904 St. Louis World's Fair, where, incidently, there were at least 50 ice cream booths selling 5,000 gallons of ice cream a day.

According to one popular story, Ernest A. Hamwi, a concessionaire at the fair, was selling a waffle-like food called "zalabia" in a booth next to an ice cream vendor who ran out of dishes. Hamwi rolled one of his waffles into the shape of a cone, the vendor put some ice cream in it, and the rest is history!

Cones have come a long way since Hamwi's day. For example, Keebler, one of the largest ice cream cone manufacturers in the U.S., makes not only waffle cones, but assorted color "cups," sugar cones, and the waffle bowl (just right for making sundaes). The company's new fudge-dipped cup will debut soon.

Waffle cones of all descriptions — large, small, chocolate-dipped or plain — are a favorite in both ice cream shops and at home. Currently very popular — especially in ice cream shops — are oversized waffle cones, the kind you need a spoon to dig into.

"Waffle cones were developed because ice cream shops were looking for a more value-added and upscale cone product to match some of the more gourmet ice cream and frozen yogurt varieties in their stores," said Don Stevens, vice president of Co-BatCo Inc. in Peoria, Ill. a cone and batter firm. "Waffle cones are often baked on premise, providing an enticing aroma in the shop."

But perhaps the best part about waffle cones is that they are just plain fun, as proven by these two creations from the American Dairy Association. Super Berry Ice Cream Cone is a summer's delight. Refreshing scoops of strawberry ice cream and blueberry frozen yogurt are drizzled with raspberry syrup, laced with fresh berries and topped with whipped cream. You'll need a spoon to reach the bottom of this big cone. The same is true for the Chocolate Blast-Off. It's a chocolate lover's dream. Chocolate and chocolate chip ice creams are drizzled with chocolate syrup and sprinkled with chocolate chips — all in a chocolate-dipped waffle cone.

SUPER BERRY ICE CREAM CONE

¼ cup mixed fresh berries (blueberries, raspberries, sliced strawberries), divided
1 waffle ice cream cone
1 scoop strawberry ice cream
1 scoop blueberry, black cherry, or boysenberry frozen yogurt
2 tablespoons raspberry sauce or syrup
Whipped cream
Fresh mint, if desired

Drop 1 whole berry in bottom of waffle cone. Place strawberry ice cream scoop in cone; drizzle with raspberry sauce. Top with blueberry yogurt. Top with whipped cream and remaining berries. Garnish with mint. Makes 1 serving.

Major Canning Sins

Questions often arise as to the safety of changing canning recipes and canning procedures. Charlotte P. Brennand, Extension Food Safety Specialist, for Utah State University Extension has listed potentially deadly canning practices.

Making up your own canning recipe is unsafe because without scientific testing, you will not know how long the product needs to be processed to safely destroy bacteria and other spoilage organisms.

Changing ingredients in a recipe can be dangerous. Adding extra starch, flour or other thickeners to a recipe will change the rate of heat penetration into the product and can result in undercooking. Types of thickeners should not be substituted for one another for the same reason. Adding extra onion, chili, bell peppers, or other vegetables to salsas dilutes the acidity of the salsa and can result in botulism poisoning. While the vinegar in a salsa is a high acid food, the vegetables used along with the tomatoes are low acid and any excess increases the ph level beyond a safe point. The same is true of pickle making. Don't increase the total amount of low acid vegetables added to the product. There are exceptions to the rule of never changing a canning recipe. It is safe to change the salt level in anything except pickles, to change the sugar level in syrup used for canned fruit, to add extra vinegar or lemon juice, to decrease any vegetable except tomatoes in salsas, and to substitute bell, long green, or jalapeno peppers for each other in salsa recipes as long as the total amount is not increased.

Using the oven instead of a water bath for processing is unsafe because the food will be under processed since air is not as good a conductor of heat as water or steam as in a pressure canner. The jars may also blow up in the oven. Make altitude adjustments if you live 1000 feet or more above seal level because boiling temperatures are lower at higher altitudes and the products will be undercooked unless more time is allowed.

Pressure canners must be used correctly. Lack of venting the pressure canner before adding the pressure plug results in air pockets which will not reach high enough temperatures. Have your pressure canner dial gauge tested annually. If the dial gauge is inaccurate, the food will be under processed and bacterial spores could survive. Cooling the pressure canner under running water results in under processed food. A calculation of the cooking time includes the residual heat during the normal cool-down period as part of the heat process.

Letting "hot pack" food cool before processing causes under processing. The heat curves are based on the food being hot at the beginning of the processing. Note that canned meat, vegetable or salsa which are under processed can cause botulism.

Not all tomatoes have an adequate acid level especially if the vine is dead. This can result in botulism poisoning. Increase the acidity of canned tomatoes to a safe level by adding bottled lemon juice to the jar before adding the tomatoes1 tablespoon per pint and 2 tablespoons per quart.

Replacing Milk With Sweetened Drinks Associated With Weight Gain And Reduced Nutrient Intake

PHILADELPHIA — A new report in the June 2003 issue of the Journal of Pediatrics suggests that soda and other sugar-filled drinks are an important factor in the development of childhood obesity.

The study, conducted by researchers at Cornell University, confirmed that children who drank more than 16 ounces of sweetened drinks a day drank less milk and gained more weight over two months than those who drank less than 16 ounces of sweetened drinks a day.

The study of children ages 6 to 13 found that excessive sweetened drink consumption was associated with a decrease in milk consumption, resulting in higher energy intake and weight gain and insufficient intake of protein, calcium, phosphorus, magnesium and zinc, and to a lesser extent Vitamin A.

The study followed 30 children five days a week for two months, the longest time period a study has monitored children's beverage consumption. Researchers defined sweetened drinks as soda, fruit punch, bottled tea or drinks made from fruit-flavored powders, such as lemonade.

"This study is another reminder of the important role beverage selection plays in the childhood obesity epidemic," said Patricia Purcell, CEO of Mid-Atlantic Dairy Association. "Empty calories from sweetened beverages are taking the place of nutrient-dense foods such as milk. Simple steps by parents, such as making healthier options available at meals, can have a huge impact on a child's long-term health."

The children who drank sweetened drinks didn't eat fewer calories from solid food and, therefore, consumed about 244 more calories a day than children who did not drink sweetened drinks. This resulted in extra weight gain.

"Children who drink primarily soda and other sugar-filled drinks consume less milk, which can be devastating from a nutritional standpoint," Purcell said. "Doctors and dietitians agree that consuming three servings of dairy a day is critical for good health. Milk provides a powerful package of calcium plus eight essential nutrients that kids need to build stronger bones and better bodies."

High Cholesterol In Early Childhood Predicts High Cholesterol Later

HONOLULU, Hawaii — Three- and four-year-old children who have high cholesterol levels are likely to have high cholesterol levels later in childhood, which is a concern because elevated cholesterol levels that appear early in life tend to persist to adulthood, researchers report at the American Heart Association's Second Asia Pacific Scientific Forum.

Barbara Strobino, Ph.D., associate research scientist with Columbia University College of Physicians and Surgeons, and colleagues presented data on 448 children enrolled in New York Head Start preschool programs who were following the He[illegible] Start program. Health[illegible] preschool-based prog[illegible] service interven[illegible] health education des[illegible] dietary intake [illegible] urated fat in sch[illegible] and [illegible] se nutrition knowledge in children.

The study was initiated in 1995-97, when the children were 3 and 4. The children were followed for five years, until they were about 8.

The researchers measured the children's total cholesterol levels at enrollment, as well as their levels of high-density lipoprotein (HDL) cholesterol (the "good" cholesterol), and levels of triglycerides.

Children with the highest levels of cholesterol when they were 3 and 4 tended to be those with the highest levels five years later. Specifically, for those with cholesterol levels in the top 10 percent in preschool, more than half (57 percent) continued to have cholesterol levels in the top 10 percent.

Children with "high normal" cholesterol levels in preschool, with total cholesterol levels measuring on average 164 milligrams per deciliter at ages 3 and 4, were five times more likely to have high cholesterol levels when they were 8. Similarly, preschool children with low levels of HDL, tended to have low levels of HDL later. High HDL levels reflect a lower risk of heart disease.

Good eating habits and restricting fat and cholesterol to lower heart disease risk need to begin early in life.

Many Head Start preschools are practicing heart-smart nutrition. The Healthy Start educational curriculum is also being used in some centers and is available for any school at www.healthy-start.com.

Correction – In the June 28th issue the recipe for Fruit Pudding Cake had an ingredient missing. Here is the correct recipe from Amanda Sholly.

Fruit Pudding Cake

½ cup shortening
1 cup sugar
1 egg
1 cup buttermilk
1 teaspoon baking soda
3 teaspoons baking powder
3½ cups flour
Pinch salt
1½ cups berries (raspberries, blueberries, etc.)

Mix shortening, sugar, egg, and buttermilk. Add dry ingredients. Fold in berries. Bake in 9x13-inch pan at 350 degrees for about 45 minutes.

ANSWER – A Lycoming reader wanted recipes for unusual cheesecakes. Here is one from former Pennsylvania First Lady Kathy Schweiker, who said it is one of her husband's (Gov. Mark Schweiker's) favorite and caps many meals in their home. She recommends trying it with raspberries, cherries and other Pennsylvania-grown fruit.

Chocolate Chip Cheesecake

1½ cups finely crushed cream-filled chocolate sandwich cookies (about 18)
¼ cup butter, melted
3 (8-ounce) packages cream cheese, softened
14-ounce can sweetened condensed milk (not evaporated)
3 eggs
2 teaspoons vanilla extract
1 cup mini chocolate chips
1 teaspoon flour
Pennsylvania-grown fruit, raspberries, cherries or sliced peaches

Preheat oven to 300 degrees. Combine crumbs and butter. Pat firmly on bottom of 9-inch springform pan. In a large mixing bowl, beat cream cheese until fluffy. Add condensed milk; beat until smooth. Add eggs and vanilla; mix well. In a small bowl, toss ½ cup chocolate chips with flour to coat. Stir into cream cheese mixture. Pour into prepared pan. Sprinkle remaining chocolate chips evenly over top. Bake one hour or until cake springs back when lightly touched. Cool to room temperature. Cover and refrigerate several hours. Remove side of pan. Garnish with fruit just before serving. Refrigerate leftovers. Serves 12.

ANSWER – Here's a recipe to make good use of in-season blueberries from Esther Mishler, Hollsopple.

Blueberry Dazzle Cake

Topping:
½ cup brown sugar, packed
¼ cup butter, softened
¼ cup flour
¾ teaspoon cinnamon
Cake:
2 cups sifted flour
2 teaspoons baking powder
½ teaspoon salt
¼ cup cooking oil
¾ cup granulated sugar
½ cup milk
1 egg
2 cups blueberries, drained

Make topping first by combining all ingredients; set aside. To make cake, sift flour, baking powder, and salt. Mix well sugar, egg, and oil. Stir in flour mixture alternately with milk. After mixing together, fold in berries. Pour into 9x13-inch oblong pan, greased and floured. Sprinkle on topping and spread evenly. Bake at 350 degrees for 40-45 minutes. Serve warm with whipping topping if desired.

Here's another recipe using blueberries. Lebanon County Dairy Miss Royell Bashore writes that Summertime is a great time to use dairy products in your recipes. This is one of her favorite recipes.

Blueberry Delight

2 cups flour
½ pound butter
2 tablespoons sugar, optional

Using a 9x13x2-inch pan, melt butter in pan in oven. Add flour and sugar; blend with a fork. Press with floured fingers into bottom of pan. Bake in 375 degree oven for 15 minutes.

Soften and mix together well:
8 ounces cream cheese
1 cup confectioners' sugar

Spread cream cheese mixture on cooled crust. Spread 1 can blueberry pie filling over cream cheese. Top with large container of whipped cream topping. Refrigerate until ready to enjoy.

Here are two more blueberry recipes from a reader.

Blueberry Cherry Pie

3 tablespoons quick-cooking tapioca
½ cup sugar
¼ teaspoon salt
2 cups fresh blueberries
2 cups drained pitted canned red sour cherries (syrup-packed)
½ cup cherry juice
1 tablespoon lemon juice
Pastry for two-crust 9-inch pie
1 tablespoon butter

Combine tapioca, sugar, salt, blueberries, cherries, cherry juice, and lemon juice. Roll half of pastry ⅛-inch thick. Fit into 9-inch pie pan and trim edges. For top crust, roll remaining pastry ⅛-inch thick and cut several slits or a design near center.

Pour filling into pie shell. Dot with butter. Moisten edge of bottom crust. Fold top crust in half and roll loosely on rolling pin to fit and center on filling. Open slits to let steam escape during baking. Trim top crust ½-inch larger than pan. Fold edge under bottom crust and press together with fork or fingers. Bake in 425-degree oven for 55 minutes or until syrup boils with heavy bubbles.

Blueberry Belle Crunch

Combine:
12-ounce frozen or fresh blueberries
¾ cup sugar
2 tablespoons flour
¼ teaspoon salt
2 tablespoons lemon juice

Spread blueberry mixture into 9-inch pie pan.

Combine:
¾ cup sifted all-purpose flour
½ cup quick-cooking rolled oats
½ cup firmly packed brown sugar
½ teaspoon salt
½ teaspoon vanilla

Cut in until mixture resembles coarse crumbs:
½ cup butter

Sprinkle over blueberry mixture. Bake in 375-degree oven for 25-35 minutes. Serve hot.

If desired 1½ cups (15-ounce can) drained blueberries may be used. Combine 2 tablespoons cornstarch, ½ cup sugar, ¼ teaspoon salt, and ¾ cup blueberry juice. Cook, stirring constantly until thickened. Add blueberries and 2 tablespoons lemon juice.

Ice Cream Month

bine pudding mix and milk; beat well. Chill 5 minutes. Scoop ice cream into pudding; stir gently. Spread half the lemon mixture into pan; top with remaining ladyfingers and jam. Spread remaining lemon mixture over top. Cover; freeze until firm. Remove from pan; peel off foil and slice. Garnish as desired. Makes one 9×5-inch loaf.

Introduce New Foods To Picky Eaters

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) — Whether your child is six months or six years old, if he or she is a picky eater, mealtimes can be a disaster. But, if you understand children's behavior, you can help them learn to enjoy a variety of foods, according to a nutrition specialist in Penn State's College of Agricultural Sciences.

"The preschool years are characterized by bouts of independence," said Katherine Cason, associate professor of food science. "What appears to be 'picky' eating may instead be your child's early attempts to be assertive — a natural part of growing up. Before a picky eater gets to be a problem eater, you can use certain skills and techniques to ease mealtime struggles and encourage even the pickiest eater to try a few bites of new, different and nutritious food at each meal."

Here are Cason's top ten tips for your picky eater:

1. One step at a time. Offer one new food at a time. Let the child know if it will be sweet, salty or sour.

2. A taste is just a taste. Allow the child to decide the amount to try. A "taste" can be as small as teaspoon.

3. What goes in, may come out ... and that's okay! Recent studies indicate children are more likely to try a new food if they have the option of not swallowing it. Just make sure they know to spit it out in a napkin.

4. Provide role models. Imitation is a powerful source in learning. Encourage a reluctant taster to try new foods while around friends or family who will not be so unwilling.

5. Keep it familiar. Serve an unfamiliar food with familiar ones. This increases the likelihood that a child will taste the new food.

6. Get children involved. Whether they help shop at the grocery store or prepare the food at home, even the most finicky eaters are more likely to try a food they have helped prepare.

7. Give them a choice. Preschool children are learning to be independent. You can help your child feel independent by presenting them a choice of foods to try.

8. Read them a story. A child is more likely to try a food that has been introduced in a story.

9. If at first you don't succeed... Many young children must be offered a food eight to 10 times before they will try it. Continue to offer a new food; eventually children are likely to try it.

10. Relax! Focus your attention on the positive aspects of your child's eating behavior, not on your child's food.

Ida's Notebook

by

Ida Risser

People like to tell me that summer is more than half over — where has the time gone? Just now we are canning apricots as one of our four trees has had a good crop. Many fell down and were eaten by the animals.

While I was in the garden planting beans, a deer came rather close to our rail fence. It appeared to be curious and watched me for a while. Personally, I wish it would leave and go to live in another woodland.

We had a family picnic recently in Cumberland County. In the 1940s we started holding a July picnic to honor my father's birthday. Now the fifth generation has arrived on the scene. This year the host had several interesting games for the whole group. One was a guessing game on distance between trees while the other was a basketball throw. A 12-year-old grandson, who had just come from a basketball camp, was the first one to get five balls in the basket.

At our large church, we have the option of wearing a name tag. A Mr. Rankin signed our guest book. So, when the service was over I greeted him by name. Only to find out that his name tag said "Phillips." He quickly covered the tag as he had mistakenly picked up another man's tag.

Somedays we might like to take someone else's identity as when the car tire goes flat or when water stains a good carpet.

This month we are having our log house stained. First they pressure washed the whole house and used so much water that the well ran dry. Now we are hoping that we will like the color that we have chosen.

The STREAM MAP OF PENNSYLVANIA was completed in 1965 after a thirty-year effort by Howard Higbee, a former Penn State Professor.

The map sold extremely well— until it was lost several years later. Incredibly, the printer entrusted with the original drawing and printing plates declared bankruptcy, then carelessly hauled Higbee's years of work to a landfill!

Experts told Professor Higbee that reprints were impossible, because the maps were printed in non-photographic blue

The few remaining copies became prized fisherman's possessions, known to some as the "Lost Stream Map" Higbee was offered $400 for one of his last maps.

Then, in 1991, at the age of 91, Howard Higbee's dream came true Karl Ings and Larry Seaman of Vivid Publishing, Inc, a Williamsport firm, found new technology that enabled them to reproduce and republish the map Howard said, "I never thought I'd live to see this day"

Before his death in 1993, Professor Higbee shared his knowledge of map making with Seaman and Ings, and supported the creation of new state stream maps Stream maps now cover 18 states, New York, Michigan, Ohio, Maryland-Delaware, New Jersey, Northern California, Washington, Colorado, Wisconsin, Virginia, Missouri and 5 New England States All 50 states will be available by the end of 2003

Professor Higbee's maps are the first and only highly detailed maps of their kind.

Campers Grow 'Wild' Over Agriculture

NAZARETH (Northampton Co.) — Fifty youth from Northampton County got to experience agriculture first hand during the 4-H Ag Day Camp recently.

The Northampton County 4-H program sponsored two three-day 4-H Agriculture Day Camps. Children ages 7-11 years old had the chance to learn about fruits and vegetables, weather, seeds, bugs, corn, farming in the past, and animals. While at camp campers made their own rainmaker, painted a pot, and then planted a seed. Each camper was able to take these home in order to watch their flowers grow! Campers were wild over the newborn calf, newborn piglets, and bottle feeding baby goats.

Campers got the chance to make some of their own snacks including fruit and yogurt parfaits, corn bread, and butter. After learning about the parts of a corn plant and how it grows, it was only fitting to make a snack from corn and eat it.

Campers even got the chance to milk a goat, then taste some of the cooled milk.

It was a wild experience for campers!

After forking hay, shelling corn kernels from the cob, and making corn starch clay, camp concluded with a farm tour. Campers visited four 4-H family farms to learn about pigs, potatoes, goats, beef cows, chickens, and sheep. It was a great learning experience for all the campers to share about how the food they eat is raised.

One 4-H Day Camper takes one last jump into the soft bed of hay before heading home for the day.

4-H'ers Attend Camp Shehaqua

About 25 4-H members, four 4-H counselors, and three 4-H volunteers attended Camp Shehaqua in Hickory Run State Park July 7-11.

SHEHAQUA (Northampton Co.) — One of the amazing events for 4-H'ers this summer was 4-H camp at Camp Shehaqua in the Poconos. Each year, Northampton County 4-H members may spend a week at Hickory Run State Park in the Poconos. The 4-H camp is used by 30 county 4-H programs.

This year, Northampton County had 25 campers and four counselors at Camp Shehaqua. Throughout the week members had the chance to experience nature first hand by seeing deer, squirrels, birds, and thunderstorms. Camping with Northampton County 4-H'ers also are members from Lehigh, Schuylkill, and Carbon Counties.

4-H campers select a morning workshop during which they complete a 4-H project. The morning workshops that campers could choose from include Lenapes: First Citizens; How Sweet it is: Honey bees; What a Nuisance: Wildlife; or The Big Drip: Water.

During the afternoons, members hiked to the lake, are challenged by the low-ropes course, play a sport, learn a line dance, shoot air rifles, or explore nature through art. Two evenings of the week camp fires were held. One evening members were visited by Frank Little Bear: Professor of the First Citizens. Frank Little Bear taught members about Native American Culture through traditional song and dance.

4-H members gather for an afternoon filled with games.

QUESTION — Shirley Schwoerner, Wysox, writes that some time ago she had clipped an answer in this column from Joyce Raubenstine who told how to make creams from aloe vera. The instructions were unclear, and she asks if someone can tell her the exact amount of aloe vera to use. The directions she has are as follows: To prepare a herb ointment or salve, crush the leaves of the aloe vera and mix with four parts melted fat (lard or shortening) and one part dry white wine. Heat gently for 20 minutes. Cool slightly and strain.

Shirley writes that her husband's chronic back problem was aggravated during haymaking. She rubbed aloe vera leaves on his back, and it helped instantly. He was amazed. It was a sloppy procedure, so they'd like to make the salve if possible.

Shirley adds a bit of humor by writing that she can't boil water without a 3x5 card, "so you can see my problem with the aloe vera (instructions)."

QUESTION — Kenneth Wirtz, White Hall, Md., is having trouble finding replacement parts for his electric three-point hitch that is on a 10HP Sears garden tractor purchased in 1977. QUESTION — Mike White, Bernville, writes that the last few years, he has a problem with black birds (grackels) after he plants field corn. When the corn first comes up until it is two to three weeks old, the birds either pull out the small plants or tear them off. This year, he had to replant a three-acre field because of the destruction the birds caused. No one else in the area seems to have a problem, but White has witnessed the birds digging and pulling out the corn. It seems the area is hardest hit on the hills where the morning sun first shines. He has tried scarecrows, which only works in a 20-feet area around the scarecrow. Any help or suggestions will be appreciated.

QUESTION — C. Gutshall, Carlisle, is looking for proper cleaning instructions for printed cotton seed sacks made in the 1940s. She also would like a Web site address that offers information on older cotton and burlap feed sacks.

ANSWER — A Waynesboro reader writes that it sounds like the problem with the red beets that a reader had written about can be attributed to a leaf miners, which make little trails with worms. The leaves turn brown and die. The Waynesboro reader writes that leaf miners are especially bad this year. Her garden book recommends spraying with Ortho Malathion, which you can purchase at garden centers. It works for her. She had problems in previous years, and has been spraying for it the past several years. She doesn't use a sprayer, but mixes a gallon of the mixture in a sprinkling can and sprinkles it over the row.

ANSWER — Marion Capp wanted to know the name and address of the artist who paints scenery on the sides of barns. One barn painted by Wayne Fettro had been featured in this paper. Fettro's address is 304½ Jonlyn Dr., Elizabethtown. Phone (717) 361-8374.

ANSWER — Lynn Rossi, Lititz Borough, has a young groundhog living beneath a large rock in her front yard and wanted to know how to get the groundhog to leave her residential property? Thanks to a reader who called and said to drop mothballs in the groundhog's hole. Another reader recommends smoke bombs in which the fuse is lit and put into the hole where it will give off a gas which poisons animals. Groundhogs generally have two holes. One entrance must be close. After placing a smoke bomb in the hole, it needs to be closed to keep the gas from escaping. The York County believes the product must be legal since it can be sold for that purpose, but he did not specify where the smoke bombs may be purchased.

ANSWER — Wayne Urffer, 254 W. Main St., Moorestown, N.J. 08057, is interested in photos, stories, manuals, and other information that show how to convert tractors (homebuilt from cars, trucks, or a combination of various parts and pieces. This practice was common during the Great Depression, because conversion tractors were often built out of necessity by poor farmers who couldn't afford a commercial tractor. Urffer writes that he is prepared to pay a fair price for good, original materials. Thanks to Philip Smith, Womelsdorf, who writes that photos and stories about homebuilt tractors are featured in the book "Iron Will" and in "Farm & Ranch Living" magazine published by Reiman Publications. Both sources are available from Country Books, P.O. Box 990, Greendale, WI 52129. Phone (800) 558-1013.

Also a lot of tractors and people will gather at the 55th Old Threshermen's Reunion, Kinzers, Aug. 13-16. Smith writes that event is a good source of information about homebuilt tractors.

Schnecksville Fair Posts Best Of Show Winners

SCHNECKSVILLE (Montgomery Co.) — The 20th annual Schnecksville Community Fair had major rain related problems from Wednesday through Saturday.

On Friday, which for years has been the best day, the fair did not even open due to torrential rains which measured 2.5 inches. Plans were made to continue the fair through Sunday, but again the rains came.

All in all, President Paul Schwarz was quoted as saying, "We got bombed." Final figures show that attendance was down one-half from the previous year.

All the competitive exhibit competitions were conducted. Of special interest this year was the X-Treme Power Carving Competition, managed by the Masters of the Chainsaw group. There were 15 carvers from all over the world. Two carvers came from Japan. Categories included aquatic, birds, and wildlife masterpieces.

USDA Publishes Agricultural Internet Marketing Guide

WASHINGTON, D.C. - The USDA recently announced the release of a new publication designed to assist agricultural producers in marketing their products via the Internet. "How To Direct Market Farm Products on the Internet" provides basic information to farm direct marketers who are interested in selling their products online or using a Web site to publicize their farm or products.

"For agricultural producers, the internet can help solve problems of time, distance and location in marketing their products," said A.J. Yates, administrator of USDA's Agricultural Marketing Service. "We are working to provide the tools to help level the playing field for agriculture and rural communities by providing technological solutions and technological support."

Agriculture Secretary Ann M. Veneman also announced that USDA will expand efforts to bring farmers, rural residents and businesses greater access to improved telecommunication technology through the financing of more than $1.4 billion in loan and loan guarantees to rural telecommunications providers.

The number of Internet users shopping online has skyrocketed in recent years. Of the estimated 168 million Internet users 16 years of age and older in the U.S., approximately half say they shop online.

"How To Direct Market Farm Products on the Internet" is available in print and on the Internet at www.ams.usda.gov/tmd/MSB/msb.htm. For more information or to obtain a copy of the publication, contact Errol Bragg, USDA AMS TMP MSB, Room 2646 S, Stop 0269, 1400 Independence Ave., SW, Washington, DC 20250; phone (202) 720-8317; fax: (202) 690-0031; or email: Errol.Bragg@usda.gov.

NCBA Encourages Producers To Maintain Safety Vigilance

Supports Food Safety Initiatives Under 'Operation Liberty Shield'

DENVER, Colo. — Beef producers should exercise caution and maintain vigilance against introduction of foreign animal diseases during this time of heightened U.S. security, according to the National Cattlemen's Beef Association (NCBA).

Cow/calf producers, feedlot and stocker operators, market managers and employees and others should be aware of the increased risk during time of war, and be prepared for emergencies.

Eric Davis, NCBA president and a beef producer from Bruneau, Idaho, says the industry's capability of securing its borders was tested during the European BSE and foot and mouth crises in 2001 and it performed admirably. Producers and others must maintain their high level of alertness to protect the U.S. cattle herd and beef supply.

"Our producers know what safeguards are needed, but should be especially watchful today as threats against this country are made," says Davis.

"It isn't enough to conduct 'business as usual' even when procedures in the business are careful and well-thought-out. We support the administration's efforts under 'Operation Liberty Shield', and are prepared to do what is necessary to make it successful."

After last week's announcement of Operation Liberty Shield, which is the U.S. government's domestic campaign to increase U.S. security and readiness, NCBA participated in a conference call hosted by the U.S. Department of Agriculture's Animal and Plant Health Inspection Service (APHIS) Veterinary Services to inform stakeholders of the increase in the threat level, increased security measures that will be in place across USDA and APHIS, and urging increased awareness and biosecurity by producers.

John Maas, extension veterinarian at the University of California at Davis and chairman of the NCBA Animal Disease Research Subcommittee, reminds producers to follow these guidelines:

- Security extends to your telephone. Exercise caution if you are asked for information about your security procedures. Verify the identity of anyone who asks you for information, and the purpose for which it is intended.
- Know who is on your property at all times.
- Require visitors to change their shoes and clothing before coming onto your property from another farm or ranch.

Be particularly alert to:

- Sudden, unexplained animal deaths in the herd.
- Severe illness affecting a high percentage of animals.
- Blistering around an animal's mouth, nose, teats or hooves.
- Unusual ticks or maggots.
- Staggering, falling or central-nervous system disorders.

Immediately report anything unusual to your veterinarian, local law-enforcement authorities and your state animal health office. Post emergency numbers where all family members and employees have access. These numbers should include local law enforcement, local FBI, your veterinarian, and state animal health official.

Davis notes that in the summer of 2001 NCBA distributed one million brochures on foot and mouth disease and bovine spongiform encephalopathy (BSE) to beef producers.

The brochure can be accessed on the beef industry's Website at http://www.fmdinfo.org/documents/ACF7D1.pdf.

Cool Stuff: Wilson's Ice Cream Freezer Collection

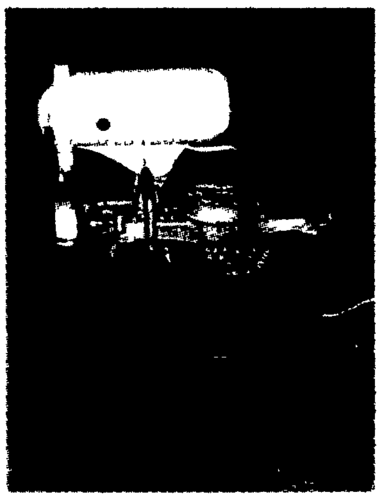
Steve "Doc" Wilson
Ice Cream Collector

FAYETTEVILLE, Ark. — I've always thought it was interesting that although ice cream is loved worldwide, the concept of making home-made ice cream seems uniquely an American summertime tradition.

How many of us remember when we were children having to sit on the top of the old wooden ice cream freezer while Dad steadily turned the crank?

Of course the rule was whoever cranks the ice cream gets the first taste of the delicious frozen treat!

These kinds of experiences led me to a passion for homemade ice cream and all things "ice creamy." Eventually I acquired a collection of ice cream freezers, which has been recognized by the Guinness Book of Records as the largest in the world. I also had the exciting experience of being featured in a Food Network special on ice cream.



One of the first attempts for an electric-powered freezer was this 1935 model Sunbeam, which made a gear adapter which would attach to the 1923 White Mountain freezer. Then all you had to do was drop in place your 1934 model 3B Mixmaster and there you have it — an electric-powered ice cream maker! The example in this collection is the only one known to exist today, and it still works!

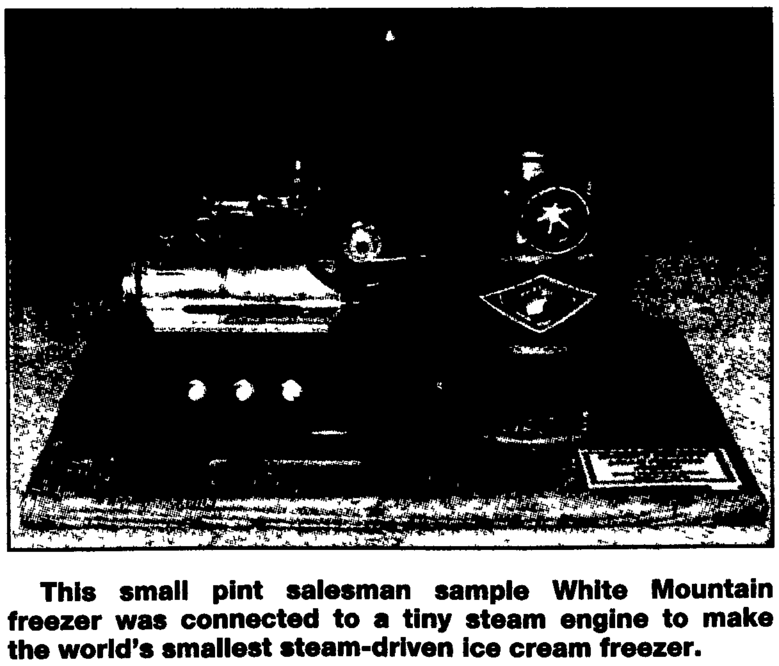
Some models more than 100 years old are still in useable condition, such as the 1871 Fre-zee-zee model which is unusual in that the crank and gear mechanism is incorporated into the handle.

My freezers have led me to lots of experience making ice cream and that has led to winning many ice cream making contests over the years.

Collecting ice cream freezers is in essence collecting America itself, and uniquely American memories. The nice thing is, it's not an expensive hobby, but you do need considerable space if your collection gets very large!

Ice cream freezers make great collectibles because they add a nostalgic and rustic flavor to any room decorated with them, but they can also be very functional. I believe that freezers should be used: it's what they were made for. But it's also important to preserve them because they operate in such a corrosive environment of salt and ice.

The 1871 Fre-Zee-Zee Benham Instant Freeze Sunbeam/White Mountain 1915 Fre-Zee-Zee (glass canister) is a steam-powered miniature.



This small pint salesman sample White Mountain freezer was connected to a tiny steam engine to make the world's smallest steam-driven ice cream freezer.

The best way to care for your collection is to clean them thoroughly, removing as much rust as possible, and then applying a good coat of paint or stain, trying to approximate the original color as closely as possible. You'll never get a perfect match, because after years of use no one knows what the original shades were.

The history of ice cream is the history of America. Made using the "still pot method" by George Washington, first served in the White House by Dolley Madison (before her husband became president, she served as Thomas Jefferson's social secretary). A slave, Agustus Jackson, known for making great ice cream in the White House in the early days of our new country later went on to be the wealthiest African American business man in Philadelphia when he opened his own ice cream parlors.

When ice became available in the ordinary home, the first patented homemade ice cream freezer appeared in 1843, invented by Nancy Johnson, a Philadelphia housewife.

In World War I ice cream was determined by Congress to be an essential nutritious food and was allowed to be made using rationed ingredients. Troops in W.W.II were given ice cream to boost morale. A quartermaster, along with his boyhood friend, who traded a jeep for an ice cream freezer later opened his own chain of ice cream stores — Baskin Robbins.

Baskin Robbins commemorated the move of the Brooklyn Dodgers to California with a special flavor called Baseball Nut Ice Cream which contained cashews and raspberries!

Ice cream has been eaten by astronauts and still made in the home by more than 70 percent of all Americans. And to do that, you need an ice cream freezer.

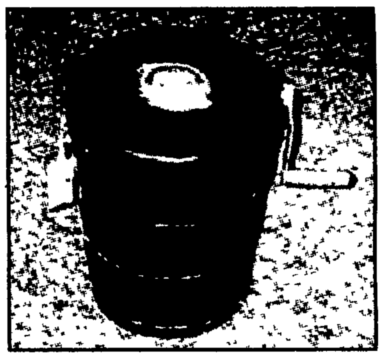
For the collector, ice cream freezers will vary in cost from $15-$20 to thousands of dollars for some very rare models.

It's not unusual to stumble onto a one of a kind model that was made by some small company which never patented their own model. You'll find various models over 100 years old still in useable condition, such as the 1871 Fre-zee-zee model which is unusual in that the crank and gear mechanism is incorporated into the handle.

Rarely, you'll find a freezer made out of the U.S., such as the Benham freezer with brass parts produced in England by the same craftsmen who crafted the orb and cross atop St. Paul's Cathedral in London. The photo shows the only known example of this 1878 freezer still in existence.

Over the years there were some innovative ideas in ice cream freezers. A good example is the 1930 Instant Freeze, which is a "horizontal" freezer. Here the ice and salt mixture goes inside the canister and the ice cream mix is poured into the bottom of the tray. As the drum rotates, the ice cream freezes in a thin layer on the outside of the canister and is later scraped off.

Steve "Doc" Wilson's comprehensive collection of ice cream freezers has been recognized by the Guinness Book of Records as the largest in the world. "The history of ice cream is the history of America," he says. Check out his Website for all kinds of ice cream trivia.



Wilson's ice cream freezer collection led him to making ice cream and winning numerous contests.

It was a very inefficient way to make ice cream, but the design has been copied for years in children's freezers.

The day finally came when the old handcranked freezer was replaced (almost) by electric models. One of the first attempts was made in 1935 by Sunbeam, which made a gear adapter which would attach to the 1923 White Mountain freezer. Then all you had to do was drop in place your 1934 model 3B Mixmaster and there you have it — an electric-powered ice cream maker! The example in this collection is the only one known to exist today, and it still works!

The 1915 model Fre-Zee-Zee was made entirely of wood, except the canister which was made of glass! And the surprising thing is, quite a number of these can still be found. And in one case the small pint salesman sample White Mountain freezer was connected to a tiny steam engine to make the world's smallest steam driven ice cream freezer.

Perhaps the best part of collecting ice cream freezers is the visitors who come to see the collection. It's a "hands on" collection, and all visitors are encouraged to pick up the freezers, turn the cranks, and let the memories come flooding back.

The most fun of all is when the visitor inevitably suddenly spots a familiar freezer, the visitor's eyes light up, and they gush forth a memory that begins, "Hey, we used to have one just like this one! I remember we used to.."

That makes it all worth while!

Happy collecting!

THE ANTIQUE DETECTIVE

Anne Gilbert

Unique Techniques Used In Glass Lamp Shades

The first decade of the 20th century was a time of experimentation with glass lamp shades.

While the name of Louis Comfort Tiffany comes most readily to mind, many other companies such as Pairpoint of Bedford, Massachusetts and the Handel Company of Meriden, Connecticut were trying new techniques. Considered the most unusual were the "Puffy" shades created by Pairpoint and the inside painted shades of Handel.

They were mostly forgotten until the revival of interest in Tiffany shades during the 1970s. When they come to auction, they can fetch up to $40,000 or more; a fraction of a Tiffany shade. At a recent auction of lamps and glass one signed "Puffy" rose table lamp sold under its estimate of $4,000 — $6,000 for $2,645. An inside-painted Hanel shade sold for $5,750.

Other examples of both went unsold.

There were many makers of Handel-style, reverse-painted glass. They sell for far less.

At the Julia auction a Phoenix reverse painted shade lamp sold for $287.

The "puffy" shade was introduced for the first time in 1907. Prior to that in 1904 it's precursor was a line of electric lamps named electroliers. They came with a mold-blown, hand-decorated shade. What made them different was the reverse painting on the inside.

Before they were decorated the outsides of the shades were etched with acid to produce a frosted surface. Each design had a name and depicted a variety of subjects. It was on July 9, 1907 that the company received a patent for what was called "puffy" shades. They are also referred to as "blown out" shades.

Pairpoint was the only company to produce this type of shade. Designs were usually fruit and flowers. However a large shell and an owl were also made, according to existing catalogs. The base of the owl lamp was a full owl figure in metal, while the shade dramatized the eyes and a portion of the body.

"Puffy's" continued being made until 1915 when public taste changed and they were out of fashion, as were all things Victorian-influenced.

CLUES: Almost all "Puffy" lamps are signed on the base. Metal bases will also have the letter "P" in a diamond. Wood bases are stamped with the company name.

Signatures on the shade are acid-stamped "The Pairpoint Corp" or "Patented July 7, 1907."

Since Tiffany lamps were expensive even in their day, many companies did their own versions. Popular were striated glass shades combined with raised metal designs.

These, known as bent-glass shades, were produced as both hanging fixtures, table lamps and standing. It was less expensive to add a scenic design cast in metal than to hand-paint a shade. The answer was a cutaway brass band with designs of houses, trees, and so forth over a striated color glass. The shades were of one piece of glass held together by a metal rim or many small striated pieces, joined to the metal. These shades can even show up at country auctions for a couple of

Itching To Collect Sketter Stuff

I collect mosquito-related items, and have quite a collection of such things. I grew up in Minnesota where the natives refer to the mosquito as the "state bird" and wear blood donor pins with a mosquito on it, and Tee shirts that say "Give blood ... move to Minnesota." I don't think that many folks have ever thought about mosquitoes as a collectible, but I got started after finding some mosquito-related items in an old tackle box which got me hooked. Now I've accumulated a large collection of "sketter stuff" which includes bottles, tubes, powders, tins, postcards, patches, counter cards, coils, ads, pads and wipes, aerosol, and hand pump spray units such as Black Flag.

Right now my main interest is 1. Great Graphics and 2. Great Names some of which includes ZZZZ, Buzz Off, Skram, Skeeter Skatter, Shoo Fly, Skeeter Skoot, Skeeto Go, Skee Ram, Shu Bug, Skeeterine and on and on. My buddy Steve Lumpkin and I are contemplating doing a collector reference booklet on the subject. We already have a name for our collaboration being "The Swat Team of Streater and Lumpkin."

Readers who have mosquito items or anything related to them including any graphics or names, can contact The Swat Team, R.L. Streater (which rhymes with "miskeeter') at P.O. Box 393, Mercer Island, WA 98040, phone (206) 232-9060.

hundred dollars.

When an unsigned shade can be attributed to a known maker the price goes up.

Remember, even though a shade may look like a Tiffany, if slag glass was used, it isn't. Nor did Tiffany use the bent glass technique.

Condition is always important. When repairs are needed, find out who to use from your local museum who restores their glass and metal items.

Always carefully examine for repairs before buying if the price seems too cheap.

To keep an eye on prices, subscribe to the various auction house catalogs on the subject. Among them are Toomey Treadway, Cincinnati, Ohio, and James Julia, Fairfield, Maine.

Questions And Answers About Odd Collections

tivities and ventures, wore certain devices to keep from getting bitten such as mosquito head nets and mosquito shields. The head net was a device made of white tarleton netting, fitted with five light weight round steel springs or bands, that when fully expanded or opened, was made to be worn over a hat or cap on one's head extending down over the neck and shoulders protecting the wearer from insect bites. When not in use, the head net (which was collapsible) could be folded and put into one's coat pocket.

Whereas the mosquito hat shield, made of sturdy netting, was attached around the wide brim of a muslin fishing hat, and was made to hang down over one's head and neck to keep mosquitoes away, and when not in use, the light weight hat shield could be rolled up and carried or stuffed into one's pocket. Then, too, the 1929 Johnson Smith & Co.

If you find, or come across, any of these or any other old or odd skeeter items or advertisements, write the Swat Team at their above addresses. Also to avoid the blood suckers and keep mosquitoes from stinging and stabbing your flesh, visit the amazing bug shirt website: http:// www.bugshirt.com Or phone 1-800-998-9096 toll free to request a free illustrated catalog. Incidentally, to stop itching instantly from mosquito or other insect bites, dab on fast acting Rhuli Gel; phone (800) 558-5252 to inquire where to get it. Once you use it, you'll never be without it.

Could you please repeat the information you wrote sometime back regarding workaholic collectibles that I meant to save but can't find, and therefore was probably discarded?

Connie Williams
Virginia Beach, VA

You're not the only one who requested that the workaholic item be repeated. Here it is in its original-as-written Q & A form:

Every year, my workaholic husband makes the same New Year's resolution to cut back on his work — which he doesn't keep. I've given him all sorts of gruesome novelty items to remind him of his promise, but they end up being displayed on his desk as a collection. Can you offer any suggestions?

Mrs. M.B.
Bradenton, FL

You can sell the gruesome collection and live with your husband's obsession. Or better yet, go outdoors and find a brownstone to give your husband with a copy of Emily Dickenson's following poem: How happy is the little stone, That rambles in the road alone,, And doesn't care about careers, And exigencies never fears; Whose coat of elemental brown, A passing universe put on; And independent as the sun, Associates or glows alone, Fulfilling absolute decree, In casual simplicity.

BRODHEAD, Wis. — Kuhn Knight, Inc., of Brodhead, Wis., has awarded a Dealer Sales Plaque to Rovendale Ag and Barn Inc. of Watsontown for outstanding sales efforts in 2002.

Kuhn Knight, with manufacturing facilities in Brodhead and Greeley, Colo., is a manufacturer of Reel Auggie TMR mixers, Commercial SDL Feedlot and Dairy mixers, Verti-Maxx vertical TMR mixers, Botec 4-auger TMR mixers, ProTwin Slinger side-discharge spreaders, and 1100 Series box spreaders for both agricultural and commercial/industrial use.

Land O'Lakes Farmland Feed Develops Markets For Ethanol Co-Products

ARDEN HILLS, Minn. — Land O'Lakes Farmland Feed LLC is working with corn and livestock producers to enhance their profitability through the marketing and sale of ethanol co-products, an effort that has literally materalized within the past three years.

Dried distillers grains with solubles (DDGS) and wet distillers grains (WDG), which are co-products of the ethanol production process, have recently been recognized as practical and cost-efficient feed supplements for cattle, swine, and poultry.

By leveraging its expertise and national cooperative feed distribution system, the company is working to provide ethanol producers a national outlet to market and sell their DDGS and WDG. The exclusive marketer of these two products for several ethanol plants, the company is also focused on becoming the marketer for other ethanol operations being proposed or currently under construction.

"Land O'Lakes Farmland Feed has made a major commitment to develop markets for these products," said Jim Jolly, Land O'Lakes national manager, distillers grains.

About 80 percent of the DDGS and WDG produced is fed to dairy and beef cattle. As product awareness grows, swine and poultry producers also are incorporating these cost-efficient feed supplement products into their feeding regimens.

Industry analysts expect ethanol production to dramatically increase over the next five to ten years. Land O'Lakes Farmland Feed plans to continue developing markets for ethanol co-products through numerous marketing initiatives.

Land O'Lakes Farmland Feed LLC, formed in 2000. is a national organization serving producers and their families through 2,800 local cooperatives throughout the U.S. The company, in combination with its wholly owned subsidiary Purina Mills, LLC, is North America's leading feed manufacturer providing producers, cooperatives, and dealers with an extensive line of complete animal feed, ingredients, and services designed to help agricultural producers, dealers, and cooperatives compete in the global marketplace.

Beef Producers Look To Bolster Demand During Tough U.S. Economic Times

MIDDLETOWN (Dauphin Co.) — Demand for beef is holding relatively steady, with only a 1½ percent decrease during 2002, and an increase of more than three percent since 2000. Demand has risen about 10 percent since 1998.

"We obviously would like to see demand for our product stay in positive numbers," said Monte Reese, chief operating officer for the Cattlemen's Beef Board. "But considering how weak other sectors of the economy have been, we're encouraged that we're holding our own — especially since our product sometimes commands a premium."

Reese said beef demand's strength is especially heartening in light of record beef supplies and a decline in some export markets for beef. He attributes some of the health in beef demand to more focused industry efforts to meet consumer demands for nutritious,. great-tasting products that address needs for convenience and ease of preparation.

Some of that emphasis, Reese said, has been the result of beef producer investments in research and marketing in these areas through the beef checkoff.

"Producer spending to find new ways to cut, process and market beef certainly seem to be well directed," Reese said. "By increasing the value of beef cuts, we're able to raise the value of the beef carcass and the value of the animal as a whole."

Reese points out that prices for some chuck and round cuts, which are traditionally lower in value, have increased since introduction of new steaks made from cuts that previously were used for ground beef and lesser-valued processed beef items. This increase in value has helped keep overall demand from decreasing when prices aren't increasing for higher priced steaks.

In addition, new consumer-friendly, fully cooked beef products that can be heated in the microwave and ready to serve in minutes — some of which were supported or developed through the checkoff — are generating additional sales for beef with busy consumers. Sales for these types of products have increased more than 100 percent since 1999, according to AC Nielsen, and annual sales for the category topped $147 million as of November 2002.

"It's not always a case of raising the bar on every one of the individual items," Reese said. "Sometimes it's about creating a new, higher bar for items we hadn't considered before."

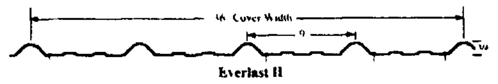
Metal Roofing & Siding

The Ultimate G-100 Process
"The Best"

1. Valspar 10S Finish Coat
2. Epoxy Primer
3 Zinc Phosphate Pretreatment
4 G-100 Zinc Coating
5 Full Hard Steel (80,000 min yield)
6 Heat formed, less paint cracks



NOTE! It is more important what is under the paint than what you see on top!

1 One of the best paints, superior acid rain, cracking resistance and color retention
2. Primer coat promotes outstanding top coat adhesion.
3 Zinc phosphate pretreatment This is a very important process - if your current supplier cannot supply you with this or does not know, you should reconsider
4 G-100 Galvanized Most metal roofing has approx. 40% less galvanized under the paint G-100 is more galvanized than most unpainted panels.
5 Full Hard Anything less than full hard will bend easier, lower snow loads, etc.
6 Heat formed Metal is painted before ribs are formed Most paint cracks at bends, heat forming greatly reduces cracks (check metal siding that is installed for 5-10 years)
7 Stronger design, superior strength, more metal per L F
8 Add Everything Together And Price Should Be $53 37 Per Square $1 69 Per L.F

OUR SPECIAL PRICE ONLY
$48.32 PER SQUARE
$1.53 PER LINEAL FT.

Galvanized or Galvalume?

For metal roofing and siding, which is better, painted Galvanized or painted Galvalume?. Galvanizing is many times better if it's mill certified G100. Why is it better? Galvanizing tends to "heal" when scratched. The more galvanizing, the better. Everlast is ten times better at "healing" than galvalume because galvalume hardly "heals" at all when scratched. Also cut edges rust quickly on galvalume.

WALLEYE PIKE

Although some years we sell large walleyes, it's best to start with fingerlings, as they get acclimated readily to your water. Walleyes will do well in water from six feet deep and up. Stock fingerlings in your deepest water as the walleye is a low-lying fish, the larger fish will have no chance to pick them up. These fish will grow to three to five pounds in no time. Where a pond contains a lot of stunted bream try some of our walleyes as they are a more aggresive predator than the bass family. Bream four to five inches and over cannot be eaten by the bass due to the spines, whereas the walleye can feed on them producing larger Blue Gills cutting down their crowded conditions. Walleyes are one of the best eating fish you can buy.

WAYS WE CAN SHIP: Depending on the distance and the type of fish, we can ship by Our Trucks, Air Freight, Air Mail Parcel Posts, UPS, Second Day Air UPS, or Next Day Air UPS. We ship the best way and the cheapest way for the customer.

1-2"	$65 per 100

Northumberland County
This is two farms by same owner which can be sold separately. The one farm of 132 acres is a modern dairy with 153 free stalls and a double 8 DeLaval milking parlor. There is room for expansion. This farm is level and very fertile. They have not needed commercial fertilizer for at least 7 years.
The other farm is presently quarter horses, and this land is identical to farm #1. This one has 113 acres with most of it tillable. The residence is unique, having been built in 1803, and #1 was built in 1830. Both have 5 bedrooms and modern baths. There is a 24' by 80' silo on each, as well as many other pluses. The second would make a beautiful beef farm or make a dairy here as well. Priced separately or both together as a package deal. Call today.

Bradford County, 2 New Opportunities
I have just listed a large modern dairy with lots of ground. There is multiple housing, great location and the possibility for you to buy a turnkey operation also is a plus. Could be rather quick possession or let's do an IRC 1031 Tax Deferred Exchange and keep your investment intact from the sale of your present property.

Opportunity #2: Over 100 acres of good farmland with bordering woodland and wooded patches rich in game and the elevation for building a hunting lodge or permanent residence surrounded by the farmland and neighboring tracts of woodland makes this a great place for retirement also. Big rack deer, bear and lots of turkey abound. Priced right. It should sell quickly. Call me for a private showing.

Rogers-Brook Farm

Cranesville, Erie County

Ken and Shirley Rogers and son Eric operate the dairy farm here, including the 60-cow Holstein milking herd. They farm about 100 acres of corn, 150 of hay, and 30-40 acres of soybeans and oats to feed the herd.

Although Ken didn't grow up on a dairy farm, he started building a herd of registered Holsteins as soon as he graduated high school. He bought this property in 1975 and continued to work away from the farm until 1984, when he made dairying his sole occupation.

Eric returned to the farm a year ago after studying dairy science in college.

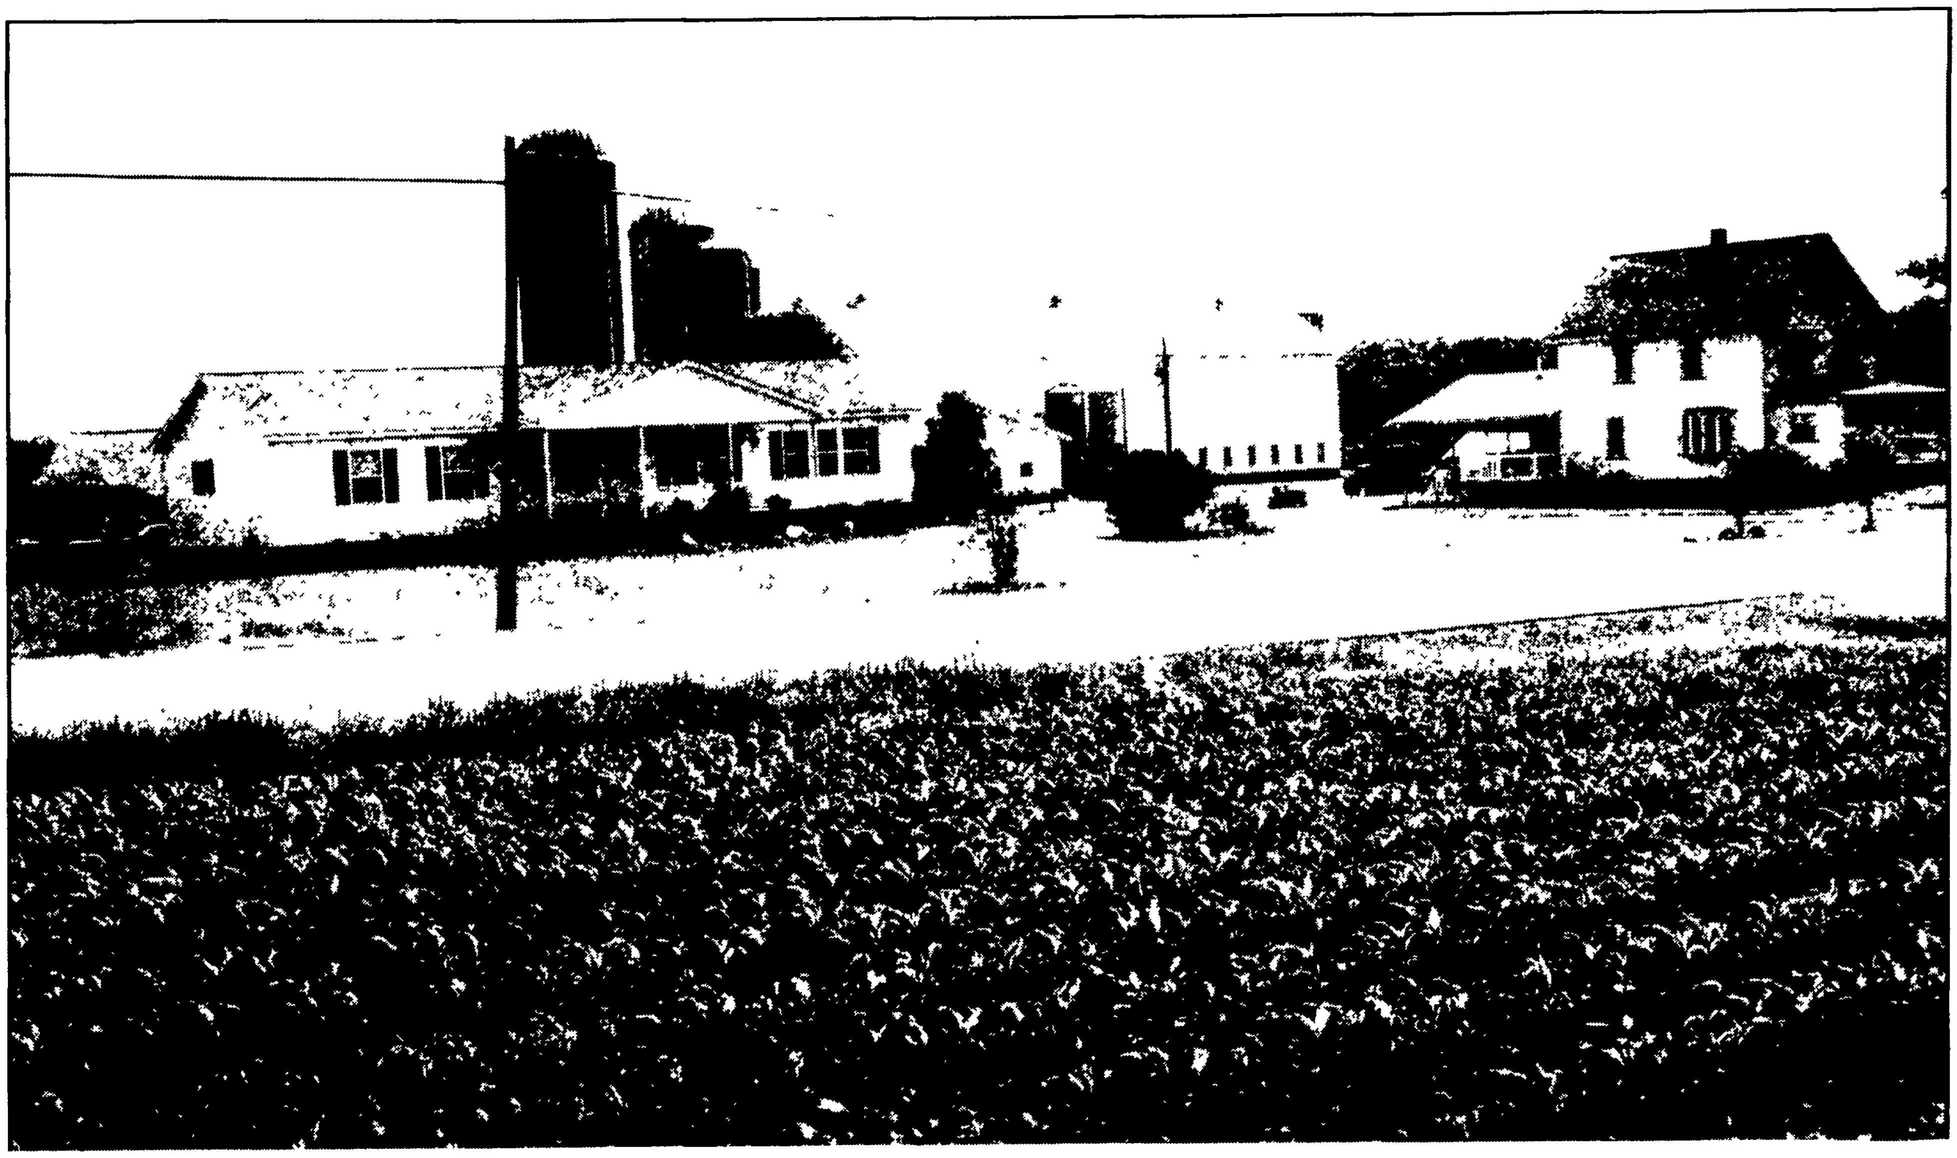
A & B Dairy

Townville, Crawford County



Bob and Norma Baughman have been dairy farming here since they moved on the farm in 1964. They milk about 80 Holsteins and raise corn and alfalfa for the herd's forage needs on the 333-acre farm.

The Baughman's daughter Sue Brown and grandaughter Becky Brown, 17, split the milking chores with part-time milker Becka Leighty. Grandaughter Mandy, 14, helps from time to time as well.

Beside their role as quality milk producers, the family also acts as a positive voice for the dairy industry. Becky Brown is a Crawford County alternate dairy princess this year, and Norma serves on the Pennsylvania Dairy Promotion board.

Stan and Leslie Swartz partner with Leslie's parents, David and Linda Bogart, on this farm where Leslie grew up. They expanded the dairy when the partnership was formed in 2001, and now milk 160 Holsteins in a double-6 parlor. Leslie's sister Heather and her husband Albert Millheim also help with the milking. The partners farm about 400 acres of crops to feed the herd.

Like Leslie, the Swartz's three young boys are also growing up on the farm. They are Ethan, 6; Wyatt, 3; and Levi, 1.

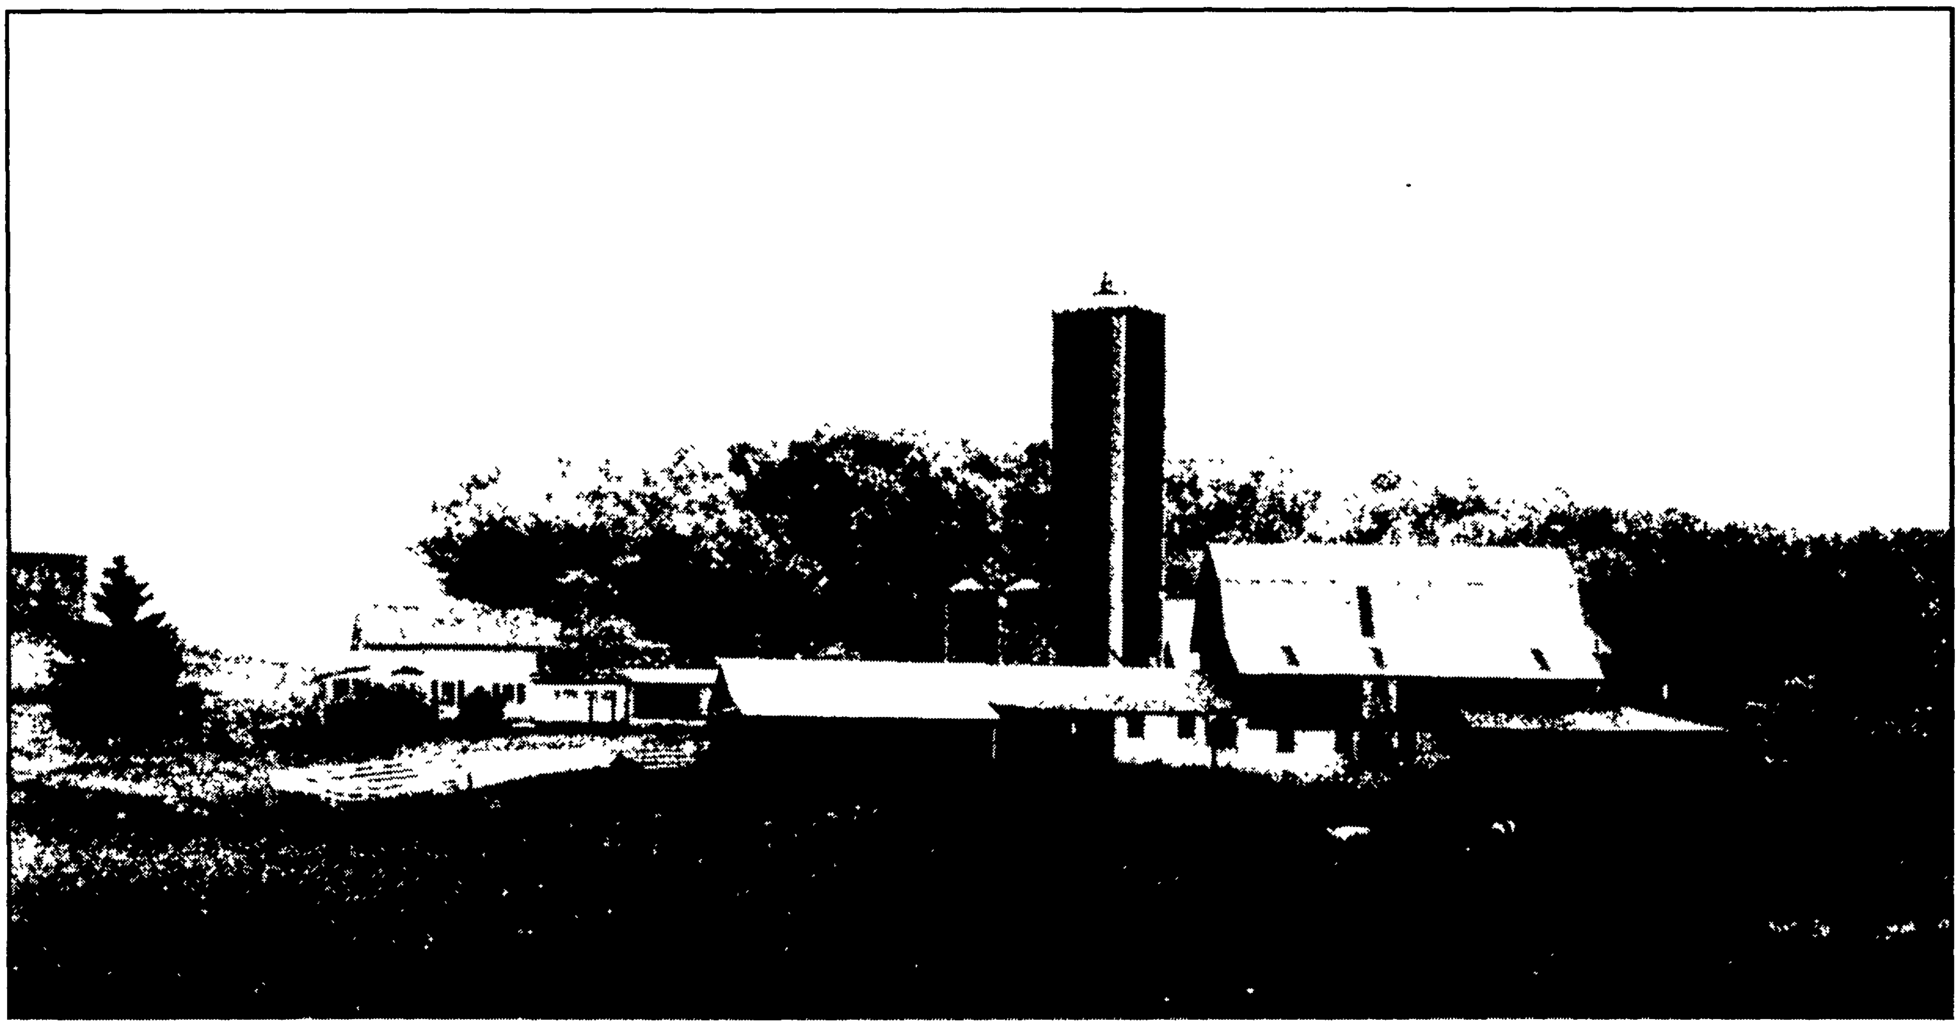
Blue-Angel Flats

Columbia Crossroads, Bradford County



Randy and Gail Watson lost their barn when a concrete silo fell on top of it in September 2001 — 11 days after the terrorist attacks in New York City and Washington.

When the Watsons found out that the insurance company wouldn't cover the loss, "it was either quit farming or rebuild and keep going," Randy said. The family decided to keep going, and are now milking about 60 Holsteins in a new tiestall barn. They continue to grow corn, alfalfa, mixed hay, rye , and oats to feed and bed the cows.

Randy's parents Roy H. and Lucille "Did" Watson first bought the 200-acre farm in 1968, and Randy began milking here after graduating high school in 1974. Roy still helps out around the farm. "He always likes to be around the cows," Randy said.

Randy and Gail have three daughters. Natasha, 23; Lakeyja Perkins, 21; and Cheyenne, 20 are all working or studying in health-related fields.

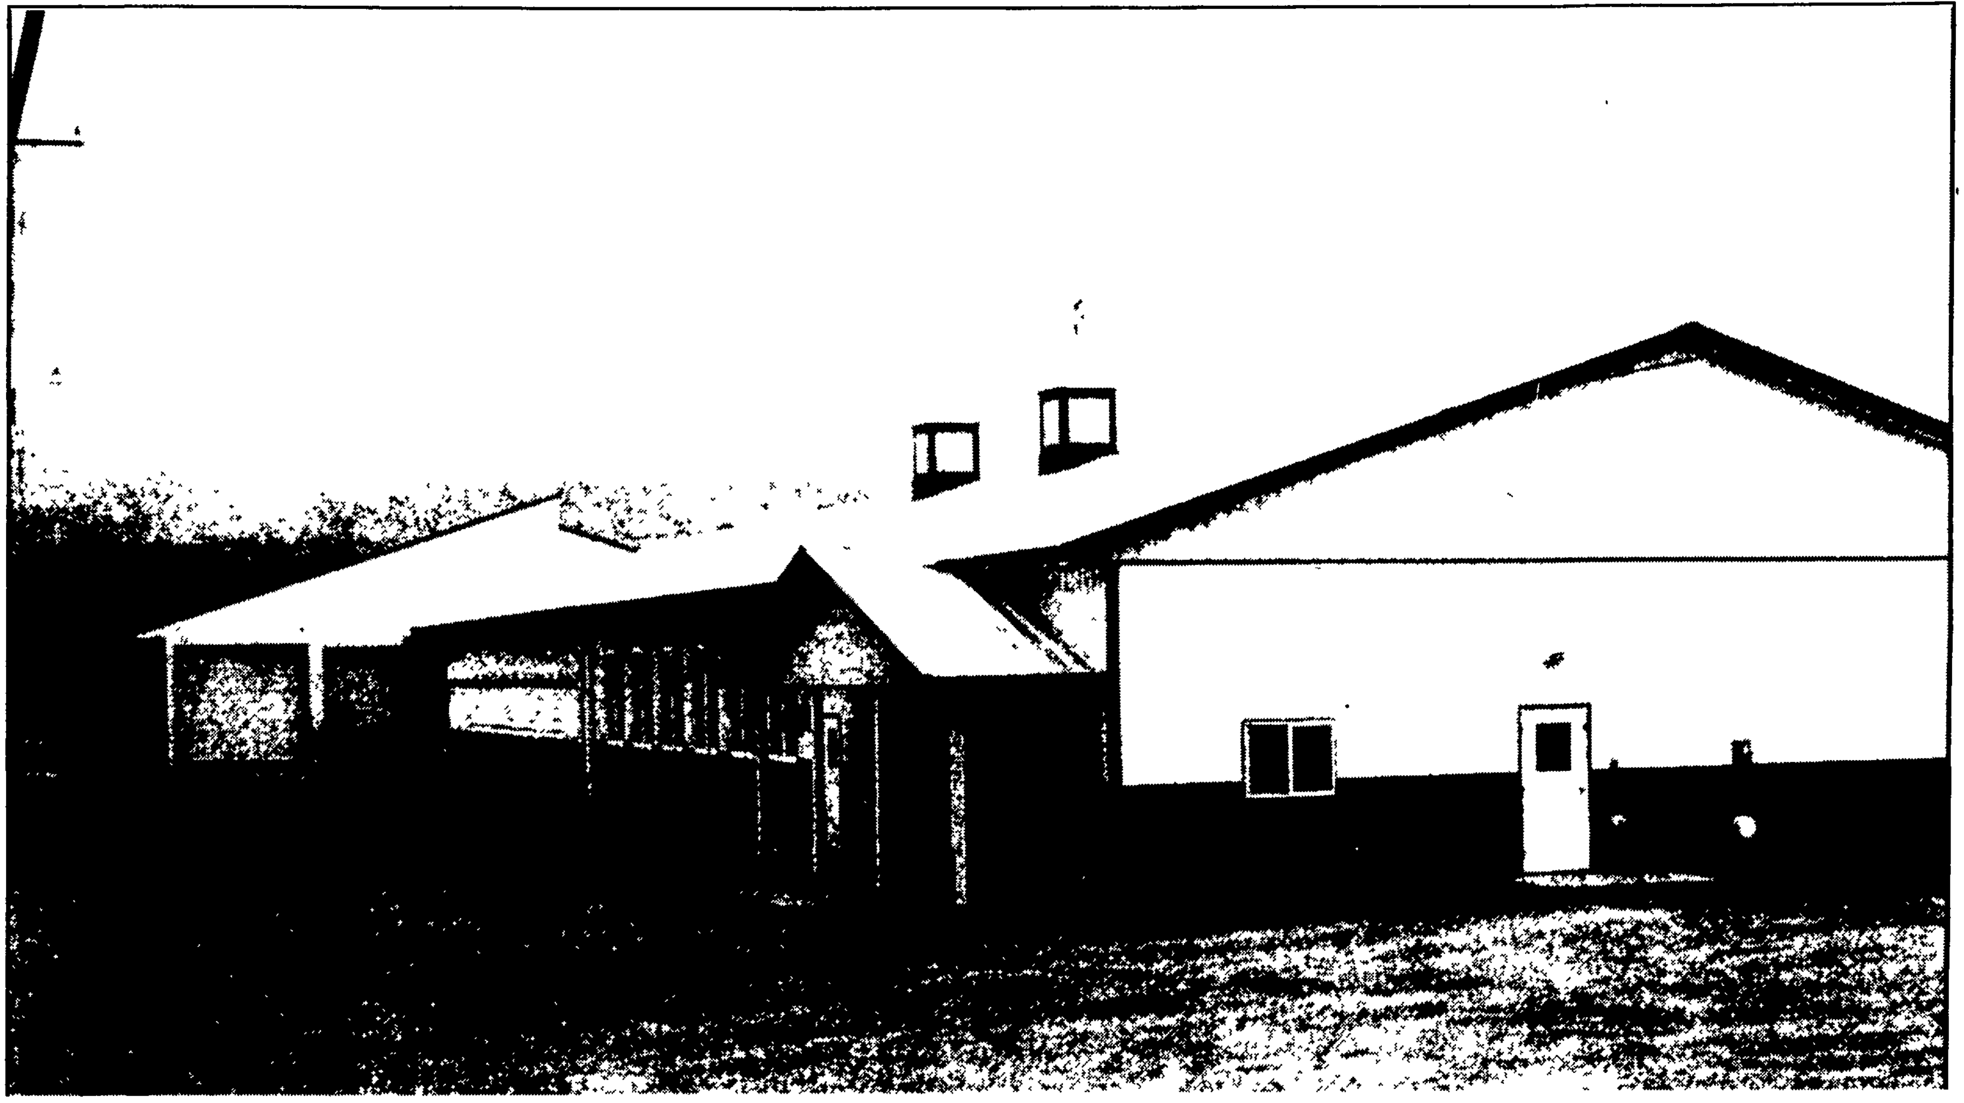
Thomas and Brenda Pepper

Roaring Branch, Tioga County



Tom and Brenda Pepper and family milk about 250 cows here. This is the second time the farm has been selected as a Dairy of Distinction winner — Brenda's parents Ted and Norma Jean Schmelzle also won this recognition for keeping a well-kept operation back in the 1980s.

Tom and Brenda began milking in their newly built double-12 herringbone parlor just after Christmas last year. Sons Travis, 23; Taylor, 21; Andrew, 19; and Jonathan, 14, all work on the farm. Travis's wife Amanda also works on the dairy and Ted Schmelzle still pitches in with morning milkings and some field work. The Peppers grow 150 acres of corn and 400-500 acres of alfalfa and mixed grasses to feed the herd. The home farm consists of about 400 acres. The family also rents some cropland.

"Most of the time it's a real blessing," Brenda said of the family's dairy enterprise.

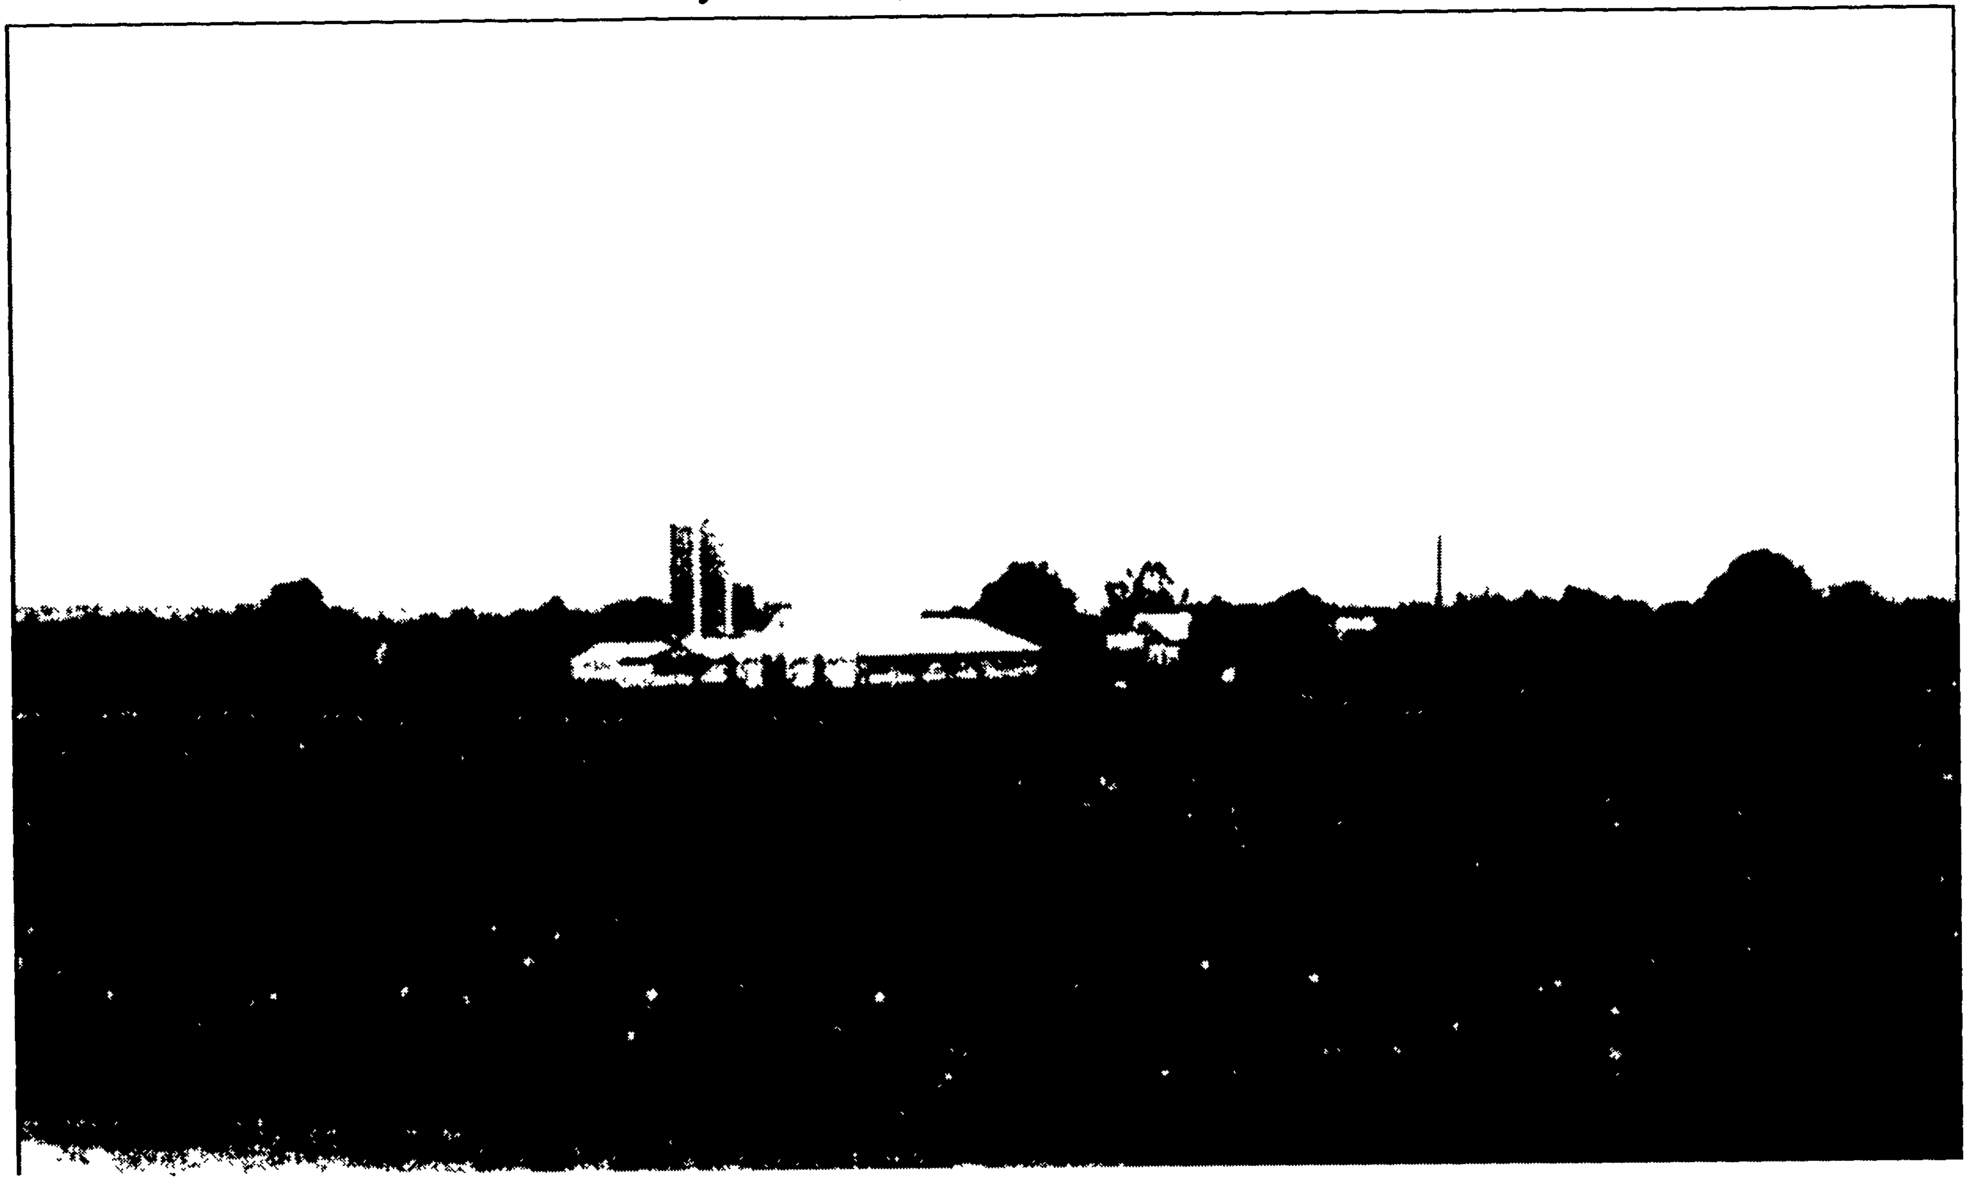
Halfway Holsteins

Myerstown, Lebanon County



Lester and Esther Martin and four sons — Burnell, 20; Linford, 17; Brian, 14; and Daryl, 11 — milk about 110 Holsteins on this well-tended 137-acre farm.

The Martin bought the farm in 1996. Prior to that, they had been dairy farming on a rented operation. Two years ago the Martins built a new dairy setup, including a double-6 herringbone parlor. They grow their own corn and alfalfa for the herd's TMR.

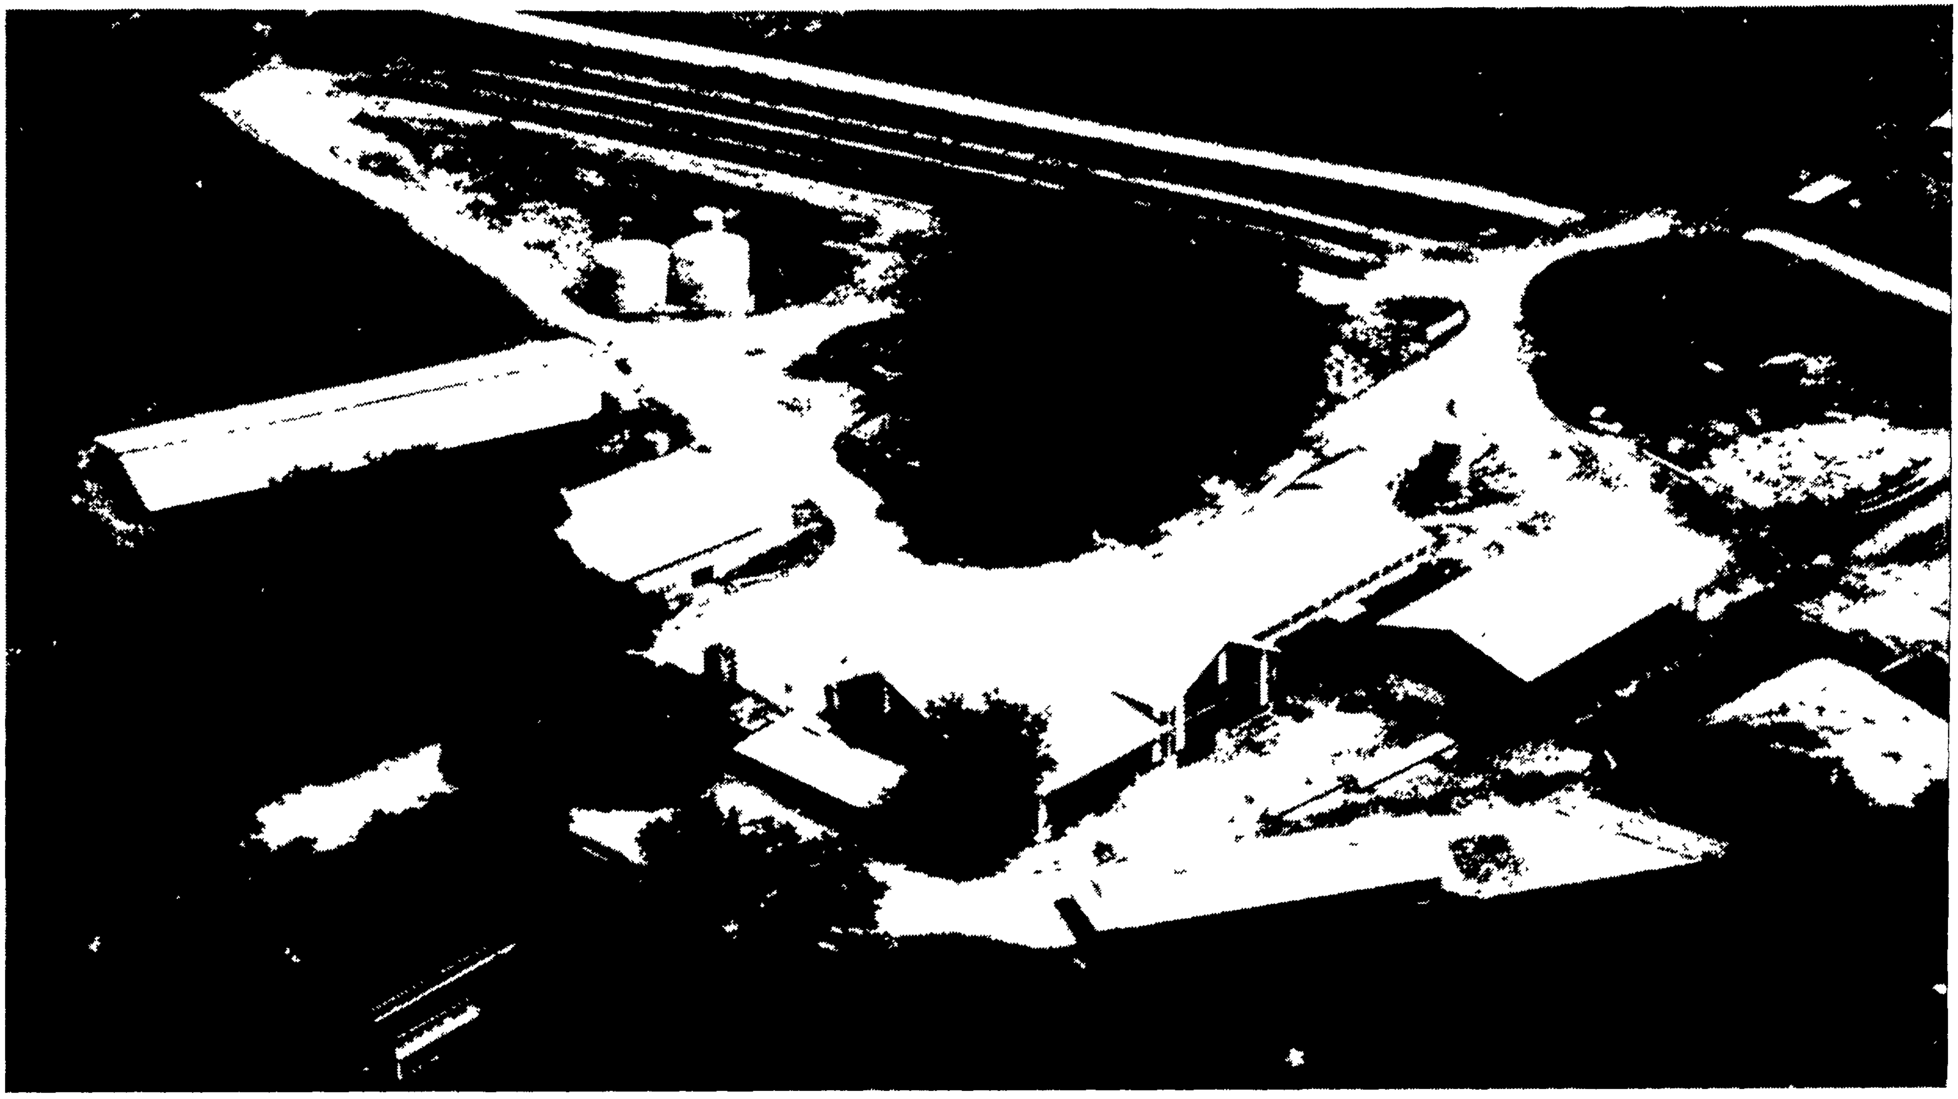
Spring Wood Farm

Kinzers, Lancaster County



"Our main focus is raising children," says Roman Stoltzfoos of this grass-based, certified organic dairy farm operation. "Grazing is the next enterprise."

Roman and his wife Lucy have 11 children. They are Dwight, 23; Hilda, 21; Delmar, 17; Charlene, 15; Clifford, 13; Joshua, 11; Caleb, 9; Althea, 7; Raphael, 5; Hadassah, 2; and Heather, 5 months.

Of the farm's 200 acres, 160 acres are in pasture to feed the 140-cow herd, milked on a modified seasonal basis. The milk has been certified organic since 1995.

The Stoltzfooses also raise 8,000 organic turkeys a year and manage 300 pastured laying hens.

Warwick Manor

East Earl, Lancaster County

Kevin and Dina Stoltzfus milk about 50 Guernseys in a new tiestall barn here. Kevin first began building the herd in 1993 when his grandparents Raymond and Elma Peachey, Elverson, dispersed their Warwick Manor herd. Kevin acquired two of the top calves at that time. He kept his growing dairy herd on other farms until he and Dina had an opportunity to purchase this farm in 2000.

The Stoltzfuses focus on the dairy cows, hiring out the field work to custom operators on the 50-acre farm.

They have two daughters — Kaila, 3, and Karli, 1.

Mahlon and Liz King and children Mark, 21; Rosa, 19; Twila, 16; Arlin, 14; Marilyn, 12; Jason, 8; and Matthew, 2, call this well-kept 40-acre farmstead at the foot of Welsh Mountain their home. The Kings milk about 30 Holsteins in a tiestall barn. They grow corn, alfalfa, and soybeans on the farm and on 50 acres of rented land. The children are a big help in the operation. Mahlon's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Enos King, previously owned the farm.

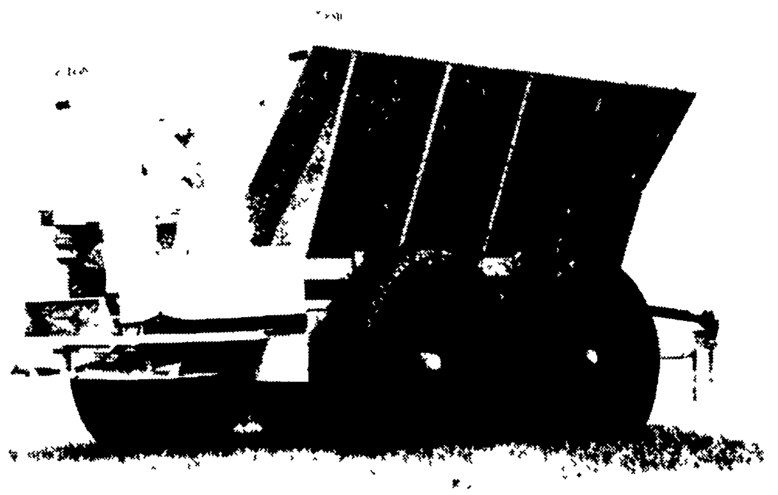
Forgy's Dairy

McVeytown, Mifflin County

Garry and Betty Forgy and sons Eric, 15; Benjamin, 13; and Darren, 11, milk 120 Holsteins in a double-8 parlor here. They grow crops to provide the herd's complete forage needs, including 190 acres of corn, 145 acres of alfalfa, 50 acres of small grains, and 15 acres of grass.

Garry grew up on this farm situated near the Juniata River. He and Betty purchased it from his father, Charles Forgy, in 1998.

A 15,000-broiler house provides an additional enterprise on the farm.



What do you want to spread?

The Stoltzfus Bulk Material Spreader spreads high rates of more kinds of material than any other spreader of its kind

From poultry litter to compost, even wet lime - when it comes to versatile ag spreaders, nothing else compares to a Stoltzfus BMS.

A reliable and versatile spreader pays for itself faster than almost any other piece of equipment. Now Stoltzfus makes it pay even faster, because the BMS lets you spread just about anything you can imagine:

- Stockpiled lime
- Fertilizer
- Gypsum
- Poultry litter
- Clean shavings
- Compost
- Mulch
- Water treatment sludge
- Waste sludge

You can get a Stoltzfus BMS up to 20' long that will handle a 15 ton load. Remember, Stoltzfus Spreaders are the ones "built like a tank." We think it's the best spreader investment you can make.

Fyock Acres

Windber, Somerset County

Mark and Roseann Fyock and their son Terry — fresh out of high school — operate this 50-cow dairy. The 100-acre home farm has been in the family for more than 100 years. Mark's father, Wayne Fyock, grew up on the property and eventually purchased the farm from his uncle. Mark began milking cows here in 1989. His father still helps out with farm chores.

The Fyocks grow corn, alfalfa, oats, and grass hay on the 200 acres of land they own. The crops provide forages for the herd and also generate additional income from hay sales.

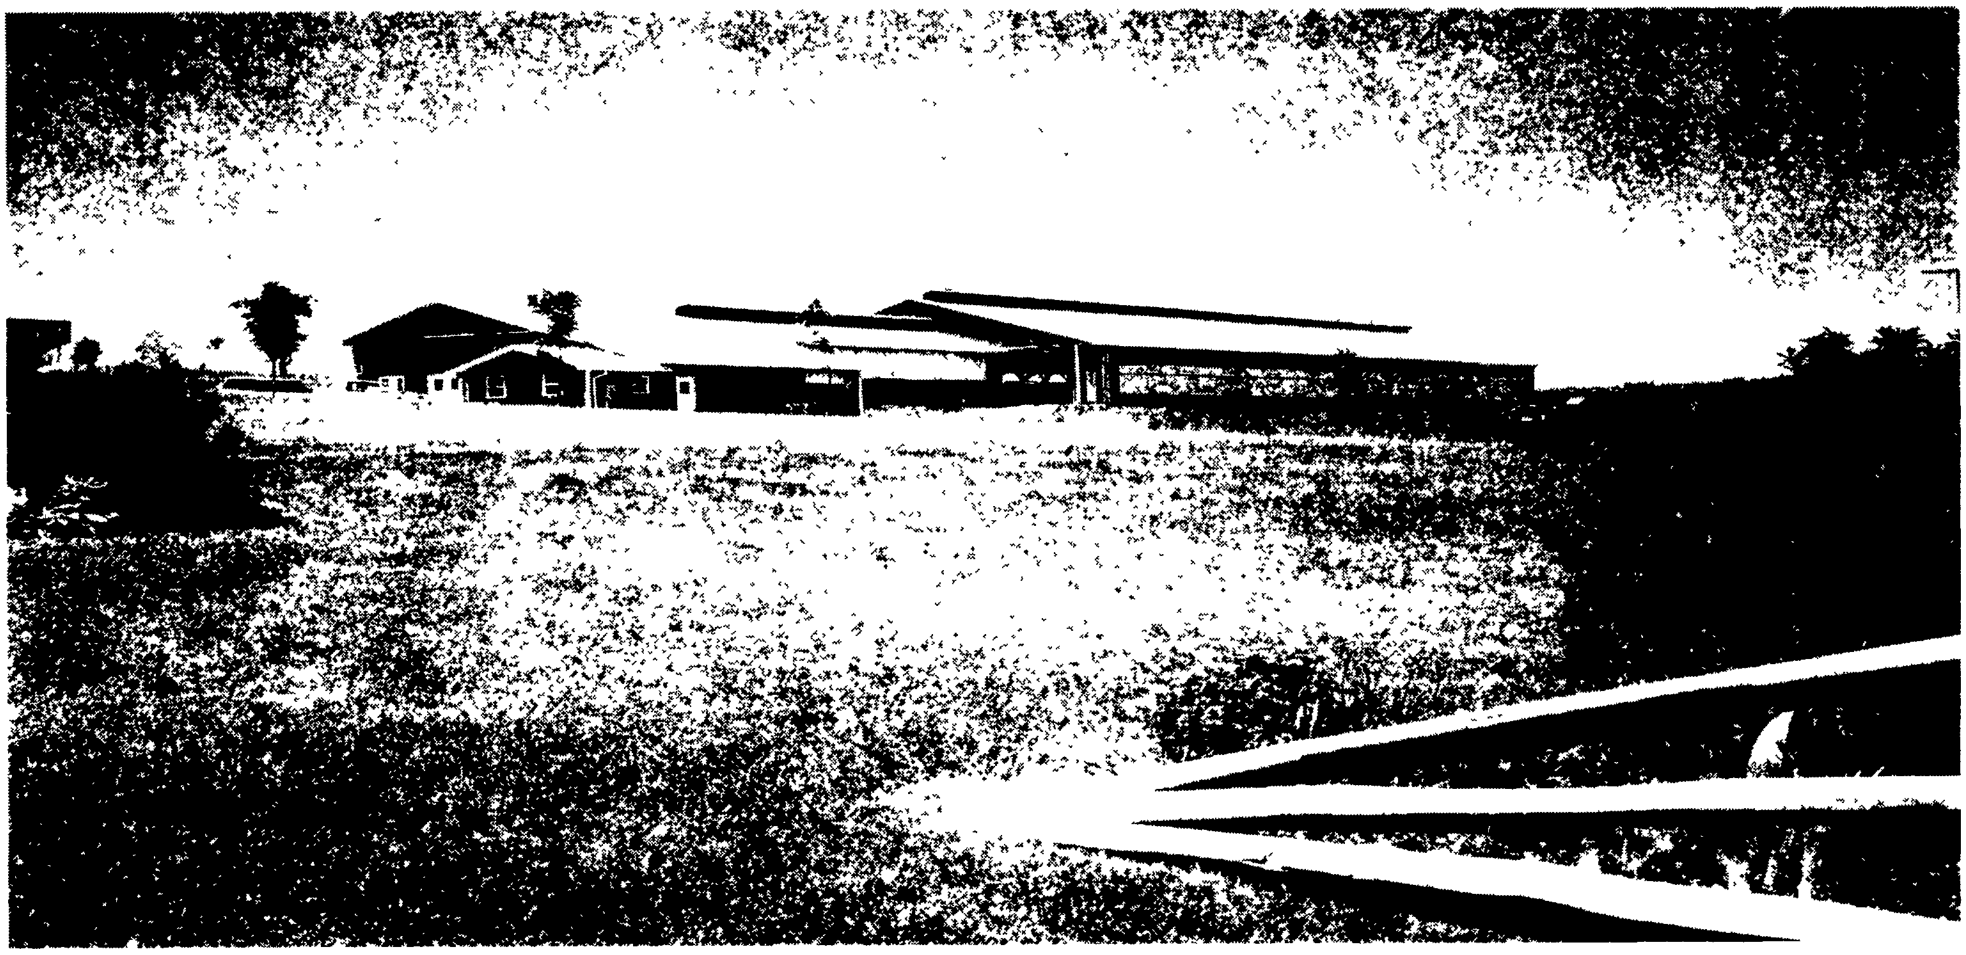
Wendell Yoder

Meyersdale, Somerset County



After a tornado destroyed the cow barn in 1998, Wendell and Darlene Yoder had it rebuilt and kept on dairying. The Yoders intensively graze the milking herd of 60-plus cows on up to 70 acres of grassland, depending on growing conditions. Pastures consist mostly of orchardgrass and reed canary grass. They also grow 25 acres of corn for silage. Altogether, the Yoders own about 200 acres of rolling land among the mountains here.

The Yoders have four children: Chris, 19; Jennifer, 18; Rachel, 15; and Tim, 12.

Diamond Farms

Smithfield, Fayette County

Alvin and Pauline Diamond and their sons Louis and Paul are partners in this 300-plus milking Holstein operation on the western foothills of the Allegheny Mountains. The cows are housed in a freestall barn and milked in a double-10 parlor. The Diamonds grow 400 total acres of corn, alfalfa, and grass hay to supply about half the herd's forage needs, and buy the remainder from a neighboring farmer.

Alvin started dairying here in 1957. His father had been a steel mill worker.

The herd today includes 90 cows owned by employee Joe Harim. According to Louis Diamond, the family is looking for more animals to fill the 500-cow capacity freestall and milking setup, "even if they come with a person."

The Diamonds recently hired a full-time veterinarian, Damien Lettieri from Argentina.
